MILE 0 (INTRODUCTION)

"THE GRAND CANYON" is specially defined for this bibliography of adventure, recreation and activity—the course of the Colorado River from Lees Ferry to the Grand Wash Cliffs (◂ see illustrations of these end points on the preceding page). The fluvial and physiographical Grand Canyon, geographically mapped, begins about at the confluence of the Little Colorado River, reached after 61 miles of downstream travel from "the Ferry" through Marble Canyon. But the Ferry is also coincidentally where the Grand Canyon's geological strata first appear at river level. Thus, the "rim rocks" of the Grand Canyon are met here and a Colorado River trip truly proceeds down through the great canyon's strata. About 277 miles downstream from the Ferry the Colorado exits from the Grand Canyon through the Grand Wash Cliffs, a palisade that delineates the decisive physiographical and geological boundary between two major provinces of North America, the Colorado Plateau (on the east and northeast at this point) and the Basin and Range (on the west and south). By convention, a boat trip starting from Lees Ferry and passing through the Grand Wash Cliffs defines a complete "Grand Canyon river trip."[1] For practical if not geographical necessity, a few references are added to this bibliography that extend the trip beyond Grand Wash to Pearce Ferry, a traditional take-out place for many Grand Canyon trips, located on present-day Lake Mead.

This bibliography is purposely not comprehensive. There are many publications—scientific ones mostly, though with exception—that are deemed to be not specifically of "human interest", at least in the same fashion as which are items about adventure and recreation. Bibliographies with environmental interests, and studies of biological organisms,

[1] This definition has been adhered to by various Colorado River historians, who have diligently tracked and commented upon the first hundred and first two hundred people to have ridden the Colorado all the way through Grand Canyon. The counts were first conducted informally by Otis "Dock" Marston. For first publications and overviews, see in this bibliography Marston (1970, ITEM NO. 2.4342; 2014, ITEM NO. 2.22069), Abacus (2009, ITEM NOS. 2.12266, 2.12437), and Quartaroli (2023, ITEM NO. 2.31511). Further, Lees Ferry is also where where measured distances on the Colorado River begin, both down- and upstream (see herein, "Two Mile 0s", pp. xxvii-xxviii).

have been separately produced by Raven's Perch Media[2]; to include such topics in this bibliography except in special sections would be distracting, though a few are added to the main bibliography because they have overlapping human-interest themes.[3]

Two major categories not expressly of "human interest", but nonetheless are humanly engaged, are relegated to separate sections: "Administrative Perspectives" and "Hydraulics and Hydrogeology". They are not ignored because they are deemed significant for their attention to ongoing issues pertaining to the river, affecting groups and individuals. The administrative items also encompass a broad sphere of wrangling public opinion and action that relates to these issues.

This bibliography includes a separate section for "Colorado River Guides," which comprises surveyed and otherwise mapped productions that are restricted to or incorporate the Colorado River through Grand Canyon. These begin with the 1924 "Plan and Profile" produced from the Birdseye Expedition of 1923.

An additional section on "Other Bibliographies" lists other reference materials as a matter of comprehensiveness. Though historical, they are mostly less inclusive.

Balduin Möllhausen and the First Illustration of a Grand Canyon Rapid, 1858

THIS BIBLIOGRAPHY OF the Colorado River in Grand Canyon begins with the year 1858, not for any event that took place as travel on the river but for the long-overlooked significance of the earliest artistic depiction of a Colorado River rapid in the Grand Canyon, which required being on the spot.

Far downstream from Grand Wash the first exploratory trip to the Grand Canyon began in the closing days of 1857. This was the army-sponsored upriver expedition led by Lt. Joseph C. Ives aboard the purpose-built, diminutive sternwheel steamboat Explorer. From the Gulf of California, they established a limit of navigability in Black Canyon, then returned to Beale's Crossing to leave ashore the members of a land expedition. The land contingent reached Grand Canyon with mules in April 1858, at Diamond and Cataract (Havasu) Creeks, before moving

[2] The Raven's Perch Media website includes a tab for a current Publications List (https://ravensperch.org,). That occasionally updated list contains descriptions of all publications and live web links to download or view those various publications, as their PDF originals or in flip book formats. Most publications are also archived via the Internet Archive online (https://archive.org).

[3] There are many books and magazine articles "about" the Colorado River, too, that are overlooked in this bibliography that must instead focus on the activities of people on the river.

east to Fort Defiance, where the expedition concluded. Lt. Ives wrote all about it in his profusely illustrated government report in 1861, introducing the world to some categorically astonishing landscapes.[4]

The burly German explorer–naturalist–artist–writer Heinrich Balduin Möllhausen, who accompanied Ives, wrote about this nearly a year before the official account was published. (It was in German and published overseas. For a long time few people in America knew of it, and most of it is still not available in English.[5]) Balduin (the name he preferred) was now on land, riding a mule, and having gone into the Grand Canyon managed to be the first to illustrate a canyon rapid. Back home in Germany he turned his expedition sketches into watercolors, which then his publisher made a few into chromolithographs for his two-volume memoir of the expedition.[6] One of these depicted Diamond Creek Rapid (see next page), a place beside which he had stood and where eleven long years later John Wesley [4] J. C. Ives, Report Upon the Colorado River of the West (Government Printing Office, Washington, 1861; 36th Congress, 1st Session, House Document 90 and concurrently as an unnumbered Senate Executive Document). The only difference between the two versions is that the Senate document added two geologic maps by the expedition's geologist, John Strong Newberry. [For background on Explorer and the upriver expedition, see Earle E. Spamer, Explorer: Andrew J. Carroll on the Colorado River, 1857–1858 (Raven's Perch Media, 2022), PDF (9 MB, 108 pp.) https://ravensperch.org/wp-content/uploads/2022/11/EXPLORER.pdf; third-party flip book available at https://online.fliphtml5.com/ryvqb/qdpp/; Internet Archive, https://archive.org/details/explorer_20251118.] The mules for the land expedition were brought upriver by teamsters from Fort Yuma to Beale's Crossing.

[5] Möllhausen detailed much that Ives' official report did not. For example, it seems that, once in the field on land, Ives had entertained the idea of going upstream to locate the confluence of the Grand and Green(!), though even their attempt to locate the cartographically misplaced confluence of the Little Colorado and Colorado Rivers came to nothing. Möllhausen's account was published as Reisen in die Felsengebirge Nord-Amerikas bis zum Hoch-Plateau von Neu-Mexico, unternommen als Mitglied der im Auftrage der Regierung der Vereinigten Staaten ausgesandten Colorado-Expedition [Travels into the Rocky Mountains of North America to the High Plateau of New Mexico, undertaken as a member of the Colorado Expedition on behalf of the United States Government] (Otto Purfürst, Leipzig, no date [1860]; also published as the more usually cited Hermann Costenoble, Leipzig, 1861).

The part of the land expedition from the Colorado River to and into the Grand Canyon at Diamond Creek and Cataract Creek has been translated (along with a transcription of Ives' account for the same period) in Earle E. Spamer (ed.), Balduin Möllhausen's Grand Canyon: An English Translation from Chapters 21-25 of "Travels into the Rocky Mountains of North America to the High Plateau of New Mexico" (Raven's Perch Media, 2022), PDF (8 MB, 150 pp.) https://ravensperch.org/wp-content/uploads/2022/10/MOLLHAUSEN_.pdf; third-party flip book available at https://online.fliphtml5.com/ryvqb/rfsl/; Internet Archive, https://archive.org/details/balduin-moellhausens-grand-canyon. [6] Möllhausen sent his paintings to America to be used in Ives' official report. Some of them are fortuitously preserved in the Amon Carter Museum of American Art in Fort Worth, TX, and are accessible online at (https://www.cartermuseum.org/art-artists/?art=1&archive=0&keys=Heinrich%20Balduin%20M%C3%B6llhausen). These will be recognized in scenes that appeared as lithographs and engravings in Lt. Ives' report.

"Der Diamant-Bach (Diamond creek)."

[translation: The Diamond-Stream (Diamond Creek).]

This is the first illustration of a Grand Canyon rapid, visited April 1858. It is a chromolithograph of the upstream view of the Colorado River just below the mouth of Diamond Creek, after a painting by Balduin Möllhausen. His original watercolor is in the Amon Carter Museum, viewable online at https://www.cartermuseum.org/collection/mouth-diamond-creek-colorado-river-view-south-1988136 (the museum's cataloged title is "Mouth of Diamond Creek. Colorado River, View from the South"). The lithographer, A. Edelman of Leipzig, has smoothed out the rapid and added to the artist's human-interest features. The odd coloring applies to the Colorado not its namesake red but a greenish-blue livery, a constraint of the two-color chromolithography.

(Balduin Möllhausen, Reisen in die Felsengebirge Nord-Amerikas (Otto Purfürst, Leipzig, no date [1860]), Vol. 2, facing p. 55. Courtesy of The Linda Hall Library of Science, Engineering & Technology.)

Powell and companions would boat through with hardly a mention.[7] Möllhausen's water-colors of scenery and Native Americans were sent to America to be made into lithographs

[7] All that Powell said about Diamond Creek in his official report was, "At the apex of this bend [in the river], Diamond Creek makes its contribution from the south, and it was here that Lieutenant Ives and [physician–geologist] Doctor [John Strong] Newberry came down to the depths of the Grand Cañon." (Powell, Exploration of the Colorado River of the West and Its Tributaries [Government Printing Office, Washington, 1875], p. 196). His more elaborate rewriting of 1895 did not make any mention (Canyons of the Colorado [Flood and Vincent, The Chatauqua-Century Press, Meadville, Pa., 1895], facsimile reprint Dover Publications, New York, 1961.)

to illustrate Joseph C. Ives' report on the Colorado River expedition (and its land component), though not all were used. They were later forgotten but rediscovered in the latter part of the 20th century. Forty-seven pieces are now in the Amon Carter Museum of American Art, in Fort Worth, Texas, and are illustrated on the museum's website.[8] For more on the paintings, and an excellent biographical introduction to Möllhausen, see Ben W. Huseman, Wild River, Timeless Canyons.[9] The entire Möllhausen art collection is reproduced in that volume, with discussions.

Often ignored amidst the historical attentions to the diminutive Explorer's famous trip up the river is the fact that this had not been its first venture on the water. Ives mentioned but briefly:

> "In the latter part of June [1857] I ordered of Reaney, Neafie & Co., of Philadelphia, an iron steamer, fifty feet long, to be built in sections, and the parts to be so arranged that they could be transported by railroad, as the shortness of time required that it should be sent to California, via the Isthmus of Panama. About the middle of August the boat was finished, tried upon the Delaware, and found satisfactory, subject to a few alterations only [which was an understatement]. It was then taken apart, sent to New York, and shipped on board of the California steamer which sailed on the 20th of August for Aspinwall [Colón]. Mr. A. J. Carroll, of Philadelphia, who had engaged to accompany the expedition as steamboat engineer, went out in charge of the boat."[10]

That's all he said. But there you have it: Explorer's maiden voyage wasn't up the Colorado, but on the Delaware River, a tidal stream as much unlike the rapid-filled lower Colorado as could be imagined. But who was Carroll? For a century and a half we had no idea who he was (not even his given name), though he traveled with the boat, rigged it on the mudflats of the delta del Río Colorado on the Baja side of the gulf, and handled it on its excursion to Black Canyon and back to Yuma. This was Andrew J. Carroll, a 26-year-old Irish immigrant from Philadelphia, apparently a very good stationary engineer and sometimes shipwright. Perhaps most importantly, he was available to travel with the iron boat kit the long way around to the Colorado, aboard steamers, a schooner, and the newly built trans-Panamanian railroad.

8 Möllhausen's surviving paintings, fortuitously preserved in the Amon Carter Museum of American Art in Fort Worth, TX, are accessible online at https://www.cartermuseum.org/art-artists/?art=1&archive=0&keys=Heinrich%20Balduin%20M%C3%B6llhausen. These will be recognized as scenes appearing as lithographs and engravings, with modifications, in Lt. Ives' report in 1861.

9 Ben W. Huseman, Wild River, Timeless Canyons: Balduin Möllhausen's Watercolors of the Colorado (Amon Carter Museum, Fort Worth, Texas, 1995; distributed by University of Arizona Press, Tucson).

10 Ives, Report Upon the Colorado River of the West, Part 1 (General Report), p. 21.

This detail of the lithograph, "Chimney Peak," the frontispiece in J.C. Ives' Report Upon the Colorado River of the West (1861), depicts the expedition's steamboat Explorer on the lower Colorado River, engraved by J. J. Young after original artwork by Balduin Möllhausen. The original painting in the Amon Carter Museum reveals that liberties were taken by the lithographer. Engineer Andrew J. Carroll, hatless, stands at the steam pipe and paddle-wheel engine beneath the overhang. Riverboat captain David Robinson is at the tiller above him. Lt. Ives stands in front of the flagpole. Herr Möllhausen stands in front of the captain, though unrecognizably redrawn compared to the artist's original self-portrait. Compare https://www.cartermuseum.org/collection/steamboat-explorer-chimney-peak-198811).

(Author's collection)

Carroll made things possible. He ran the steam engine following orders from the pilot, Colorado River steamboat captain David C. Robinson, who had been contracted by Ives there on the mudflats at the eponymous Robinson's Landing. The captain stood in the elements, handling the exposed tiller perched atop the small aft cabin (the boat didn't even have a wheel). Carroll was a repairman, too, fixing the boat after a violent, nearly expedition-ending smash-up on a rock in Black Canyon—he was quite proficient at cussing, too, we learn from Möllhausen. Then he delivered his Grand Canyon passengers safely to Beale's Crossing, though he himself never had a chance to see the phenomenon. All along, crucially, he kept Explorer from exploding. Möllhausen reported that the expedition members gave him the handle, "Captain Iron."

Both Ives and Möllhausen acknowledged the duties of the otherwise nameless "Mr. Carroll" even before mentioning Capt. Robinson; fair praise indeed. Carroll's familiarity with Reaney, Neafie and Co., Philadelphia, about how it appeared when Explorer was built there. (Illustration from a commemorative volume, The Hibernia Fire Engine Company, No. 1, [Philadelphia, 1859]. The firm had built the fire company's new steam fire engine, which was taken on tour as far away as Boston.) (Author's collection.)

This 200° panoramic view of the Delaware River waterfront is from Penn Treaty Park in Philadelphia, looking from Pennsylvania toward New Jersey and downstream (right) to the Ben Franklin Bridge. At left is the former site of Reaney, Neafie and Co., now occupied by the decommissioned coal-fired Delaware Generating Station. (Various plans have been made to renovate the building for other uses [https://phillyyimby.com/2021/01/permits-issued-for-massive-development-at-1325-beach-street.html, last accessed November 15, 2022, with an aerial view therein]). The waterway was a far busier place when Explorer was taken out for its "shakedown cruise"; dozens of ships arrived and departed daily, as noted in the maritime news of local newspapers. (Photo collage by the author, July 30, 2012.)

the boat, his having accompanied it from Philadelphia, and that he was already familiar with some of its issues when it came time to assemble the kit on the Colorado delta, can only mean that he had also taken Explorer out on its shakedown cruise on the Delaware. The journey West for such a young, capable man must have been one of wonder, though regretfully very little is known of his life.

It's one thing to stand on the bank of the Delaware River, where the Reaney–Neafie firm had been, and envision Explorer puffing about. But in 2025, I was flying home to Philadelphia from Arizona, when the plane could have been guided into any number of approach patterns to the airport. Suddenly there unfolded through the window a perfect historical panorama — the place where Grand Canyon exploration and Colorado River trips really began, with Explorer and "Mr. A. J. Carroll, of Philadelphia." (See illustrations on facing page ▸)

Much more is available on the subjects brought up here, presented in two digital publications produced by Earle Spamer through Raven's Perch Media. While Lt. Ives and Herr Möllhausen frequently, though briefly, mention engineer Carroll, it is Möllhausen who offers some revealing social insights into the man that Ives did not include in his more formal report to military commanders. Yet even with such fortuitous commentary, we learn virtually nothing of Carroll's personal life, only a little bit of which I uncovered in the process of researching Carroll and the Reaney–Neafie firm.

These volumes are presently accessible in several venues: the Raven's Perch website, third-party hostings of flip books (which URLs may not be as persistent as the others), and archived in the Internet Archive. A century and a half ago there was far more shipping traffic on the Delaware than today, and, to facilitate navigation, several small islands downstream were dredged out in the late 1800s.

James White, 1867 [11]

Among aficionados of the Southwest, James White had but one story, perhaps the one bit of Colorado River–Grand Canyon history that is not really understood. What is known—certainly—is that on September 7, 1867, Mr. White was rescued from a crude log raft in the Colorado River at Callville, Nevada, about 60 miles below the mouth of the Grand Canyon, suffering severely from exposure and starvation. Once a bit recovered he said he had been all the way through "the Big Canon," the sole survivor of three who had been prospecting above the San Juan River in Utah but, having to flee from Native adversaries, they went down the river. He wrote nothing himself about his adventure, but the story was immediately broadcast by his interviewers then by others who relayed it far and wide, polished to bring readers to the edges of their seats. It was good reading; a convincing story for those so receptive.

For several years White's "drift for life" (as title-writers sensationalized it) made the rounds to the reading public. The story was an authentic one, based as it was on C. C. Parry's revelation of the events and his acceptance of them as true. Also, not long after his rescue, White wrote a brief, poorly spelled letter to his brother recounting his misadventure, a letter that survived corroboratively to appear in publications that favored the truthfulness of his account.[12] In 1917, a historian from the state of Colorado persuaded his U.S. Senator to publish a detailed congressional memorandum that gave the impression it was a government validation of White's story—of course in the process waylaying John Wesley Powell and party as the first to "explore" the Grand Canyon. It added White's own further elaboration of things, though as recollected 50 years after the fact.[13]

Detractors and debunkers have picked away at the great problems that lie in White's geographical descriptions as well as the timing of events (despite allowances for his desperate condition when found). Most venomous among the critics was Robert Brewster Stanton, himself a veteran of Colorado River travels, who went after the congressional memo,[14] then all-out in 1932 in a book, Colorado River Controversies, with withering denouncements of White's observations (reprinted in 1982 with more modern commentaries by Colorado River historians).[15]

So, even though James White's Grand Canyon passage seemed now to be very much disbelieved, the Colorado River controvery still simmered. One way or the other the story continued to make the rounds until the twenty-first century, when the facts and times were revisited by a number of people who have brought some favor back into the White camp. A granddaughter, Eilean Adams, produced a book through a university press, and a great-grandson, Greg Adams, displayed for a professional river runners' meeting a re-creation of White's raft to suggest its riverworthiness (though it was not taken through the canyon).[16]

Nevertheless, persistent problems remain. For one thing, White's description of the confluence of the Little Colorado River is so awry as to dismiss all of his account, as some have done accordingly. Perhaps the greatest point of contention has been the location where he said he had fled into the river in the first place. Some writers have effectually corroborated White's version of things, fine-tuning their evidence with field work as well as conjecture. Some others say that he could not have gone in above the San Juan River confluence as he stated, but elsewhere. Even others suppose that his journey could not have gone through the Grand Canyon at all; that, if he had instead trekked farther overland to a place on the river past the Grand Canyon (despite impractically great distances not otherwise mentioned nor encountering Native or Mormon regional residents), perhaps the "drift" was not anywhere near as long as he said it had been (but not rationalizing his dire condition when rescued).

In the history of the Grand Canyon, James White is conspicuous for having been nearly dead. What if he had healthily survived a Grand Canyon passage? What if he had been more than marginally literate? Would he have been acclaimed without argument as the first passenger on the Colorado through the canyon? Or could this story by a non-explorer still have been dismissed out of hand by those who could see the problems with his remembered scenery and timings? One can only dispute.

How much are we to allow James White? We must of course acknowledge the privations he suffered, that he was in fact rescued from the river in bad shape, and the fact that his was not an expedition of exploration but to escape a bad situation, only to be stranded along the river canyons. James White survived . . . something.[17] The controversy, so richly engaged for a century and a half . . . continues.

Historical Excursion: "The American Nile"

THIS IS A MATTER of general interest regarding the Colorado River, though incorrectly embracing the Grand Canyon. In earlier Grand Canyon bibliographies, a title was cited in such a way that it mistakenly incorporated the entire river course, including the Grand Canyon.[18] Upon reexamination, that article provides brief biographies of several indomitable women who lived years ago, tritely called by the writer "Cleopatras" only by reason of their residence along the "American Nile"—the Lower Colorado River. It does not mention the Grand Canyon. A literature review of the American Nile label seems not to have been presented before, so this section engages the historical context. It turns out there are a couple of references to the Grand Canyon, though these are specious.

[17] The two most essential current books about White's story are Eilean Adams, Hell or High Water [cited in previous note] and Virginia McConnell Simmons, Drifting West: the Calamities of James White and Charles Baker (University Press of Colorado, Boulder, 2007). Hell or High Water, by White's granddaughter, is expectedly in his camp. Drifting West is well rounded and slants toward disfavoring the events in the Grand Canyon. The present bibliography (and more concisely Spamer's focused bibliography, "It was this way..." [full citation in note 11] contains all of the things that have been published; and they include some shorter, modern items that both support and deny White's Grand Canyon adventure.

[18] John Langellier, "Cleopatras on the American Nile; memorable women of the Colorado River," True West, Vol. 58, no. 4 (April 2011), pp. 44-49. [The "earlier Grand Canyon bibliographies" mentioned are my own! —E.E.S.]

"The American Nile" is a tag that has been applied to several rivers over more than two centuries, later more successfully attached to the Lower Colorado River. In that context it refers to the regions where the Colorado supplies irrigation waters to farmlands along the river valley, to the canal-laced Imperial Valley of California,[19] and to farmlands in the vicinity of Yuma, Arizona. Being agriculturally rather than environmentally focused, the term overlooks the Río Colorado corridor in Mexico, except apparently once where the article more strongly adopts the whole delta environment to satisfy the Nile analogy.[20] In some measure the expression integrates the commerce conducted along the river and, hydrographically, the river's pre-dam annual floodings, like those of the Nile of Africa. No publication has been found that convincingly adds the Grand Canyon reach of the Colorado River to "The American Nile," nor does any portion of the Colorado basin farther upstream compare to the African river. There are two articles that, at least superficially, do apply the Nile analogy to the entire river. But in both cases the venues betray their focuses on the irrigable lands, and the application of the term to the whole extent of the river, which is otherwise beyond the scope of those articles, can be ascribed only to literary enthusiasm.[21]

Consider also the zeal of U.S. Congressman Edward T. Taylor of the state of Colorado, during hearings in 1921 to rename the Grand River as the headwater reach of the Colorado River in Colorado. His remarks can be overlooked as those of an exuberant, if not loosely informed, politician rather than those of a geographer. He staked for his state the tag then widely used in the Lower Colorado country, though it had little to do with the Nile:

> As you all know, the Colorado River is by far the most picturesque, scenic, unique, marvelous, and famous river in the world. It is the Nile of America. Travelers from every nation of the earth visit that stream, especially the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, every year; and there are, I presume, a hundred volumes written about it. [21] Daniel Trembly MacDougal, "The Delta of the Rio Colorado," Bulletin of the American Geographical Society, Vol. 38, no. 1 (1906), pp. 1-16. MacDougal began, "The Rio Colorado, the Nile of America, rises in the higher mountains of Wyoming and Colorado, cuts its way through cañons, mile deep for hundreds of miles, to the western edge of the great plateau, where it emerges to flow through the most arid desert in North America, finding its way into the head of the Gulf of California in a sub-tropical climate two thousand miles from its source." > River, from its source in the Rocky Mountains National Park in Colorado to the Gulf of California, is the greatest natural museum and living laboratory in the world.[22]

Congressman Taylor merely coopted a well-known term for literary effect, promoting a special agenda. The world-renowned "Grand Canyon of the Colorado," loosely implied and so often geographically mistaken to share the state of the same name, was borrowed for its fame. Simply by happenstance of hydrographical geography the canyon shares the same river as which promoters of the wealth of the lower portion, free of its canyons, was called the "Nile of America."

Mississippi River

The Nile–Mississippi consonance was clearly in evidence in 1803 in a French-language document from New Orleans, a printed proclamation sent as an enclosure with a letter to President Thomas Jefferson.[23] Now in the Library of Congress, the enclosure is cited by the Jefferson Papers editors as Proclamation: Au Nom de la République Française. Pierre Clément Laussat, Préfect Colonial, Commissaire du Gouvernement Français, Aux Louisianais. This was commissioner Laussat's announcement to the people of Louisiana, dated November 30th, that the territory of Louisiana had been transferred from France to the United States—the Louisiana Purchase. The editors quoted from the proclamation in translation, with a French phrase interjected, that the people of the Louisiana Territory would yet have "a place in the commerce of the Nile of America ('le Nil de Amérique, ce Mississipi' [sic] [24]) . . . ."

The term "American Nile" was first applied to the Mississippi River in American publications before 1812, as when John Melish reintroduced from undetermined earlier usages, with qualification,

> This noble river, which has been emphatically termed the Nile of America, though it is, in fact, much larger than that river . . . .[25]

Also later eds. The passage, exactly or rephrased, appeared without credit in other publications for decades.

An article in the April 1820 issue of The Port Folio paraphrased Melish's note, as others would continue to do for some time afterward, without credit [italics thus]:

> This noble river, which may, with propriety, be denominated the American Nile, and with its branches, waters two-thirds of the territory of the United States.[26]

A June 1820 magazine published a communication signed with the date January 20, 1820, in which the Mississippi had then already been referred to as "the greater Nile of the Western hemisphere" and "the American Nile." [27]

Red River of the South

Not everyone was convinced of the Mississippi's entitlement to the label. Instead, the Red River (also known as the Red River of the South), which was at the time a tributary to the Mississippi in Louisiana, was promulgated as an American Nile:

> Red river is the true North American Nile, though on a smaller scale. That title has been bestowed on the Mississippi with unparalleled absurdity. Except in the single circumstance of each protruding a Delta at their respective mouths, no two rivers could possibly present more contrasted features than does the Mississippi and Nile.[28]

Rio Grande

The Rio Grande in New Mexico and Texas was insinuated in a nationally distributed serial in 1885 to be an American Nile, too.[29] That attribution was unsatisfactory and did not catch on even though the application to the Rio Grande seems to have been used, locally at least, a decade earlier while with unclear provenance.[30] Afterward, briefly in 1888 political and entrepreneurial notions unsuccessfully focused on a project to divert water from the Rio Grande into a canal for the use of regional farms, about which Paxton P. Price remarked a century later, "They generated a great deal of enthusiasm for their proposal by predicting that the scheme would transform the Rio Grande into the 'Nile of America.' " [31] Insistently, the term appeared in a U.S. Geological Survey irrigation report even a decade after the declarations of the hopeful entrepreneurs:

> Owing to the rich fertilizing ingredients which are contained in the muddy waters of the Rio Grande this river is often called the "Nile of America." [32]

Still more tenaciously, the Rio Grande continued to be so described in 1931. An illustrated lecture by Reginald Fisher was given at the "formal opening of the Roswell Branch of the Museum of New Mexico," which was described as "a parallel and a contrast between the Nile of Egypt, its civilizations and cultural history, and the Rio Grande." [33]

Arkansas River

Also in 1888, the Arkansas River, a major tributary to the Mississippi, was singled out for special attention as the "Nile of America." It was so noted only briefly in text accompanied by an illustration and verse, but it was more expansively intimated in the title of the travel memoir in which these appeared—From Nile to Nile. There the allusion, at first literary, is corroborated scenically rather than commercially or agriculturally:

> The distinction of first recognizing in the great Arkansas river a likeness to the Nile of Egypt, which some, perhaps, have thought far-fetched and pretentious, belongs exclusively to the editor of the [Wichita] Eagle [in] his poem, "The Nile of America" [sic] . . . . Sometimes one obtains a glimpse of a face that startles him by its resemblance to one that long years ago passed from the earth, or was at the moment thousands of miles away. Such was the impression created on my mind when I looked across the Nile [in Egypt] to the yellow sands on the opposite shore, fringed with a narrow belt of timber, and almost shrieked to my wife: "Look at the Arkansas!" The banks are fully as low, the water the same color, and just as > swift, with that swirling, rotary motion observable in the Arkansas when the June rise is on. Even the great Nile bridge that rests on the numerous piers was in plain sight to help on the illusion. Nile of America? I should say so.[33]

Red River of the North

In 1892, a piece promoting population settlement in North Dakota added into this nomenclatural fold another Red River (also known as the Red River of the North, which flows northward into Manitoba in Canada), without any further mention:

> Here, then, is a region that must feel the greatest increase in population that will come to any part of North Dakota. The river that curves and twists its way between the farms has been rightly nicknamed the Nile of America.[35]

Dutch Creek

Others seem to have borrowed the term for the convenience of agricultural advertising without real regard for geographical propriety. For example, the early-20th century strawberry producer W. W. Thomas in Anna, Illinois, distributed a promotional flyer for "Dutch Creek Valley (The Nile of America's Egypt)."[36]

Brazos River

In 1908, the Brazos River Valley of Texas also grafted the Nile agricultural analogy:

> "The Nile of America," is a term often given to the Brazos Valley of Texas, on account of the phenomenal yield of all crops, but more particularly of cotton, sugar cane, corn and alfalfa.[37]

Pecos River

A year later, the Pecos River, paralleling the upper Rio Grande in New Mexico and Texas before being a tributary to the latter, grabbed the analogy, though less heartily:

> The Pecos is the Nile of America, as almost its center length of 600 to 700 miles flows through an arid country, and upon it the farmers of the entire southwestern New Mexico and northwestern Texas are dependant for their water supply.[38]

St. Johns River

Sometimes truly unsubstantiated points are made, if only to repeat local hearsay, as in the case of the St. Johns River in Florida. In 1956 one newspaper columnist recited a misinformed geographical observation, one which has appeared in other places in the 20th and 21st centuries but is cited here as an apparently early example:

> The famous St. Johns River flows north . . . and is called "The Nile of America" due to the fact that, in all the world, only the Nile in Egypt and St. John River in North America, flow north. Most rivers flow south, it seems.[39] [But take note again of "Red River of the North" farther above.]

Colorado River

Just when the Colorado River was first called the Nile of America is not determined with precision. An article on the transcontinental railroads reveals that it was an appellation already in use in 1869, though the article's author, William A. Bell, an English physician who was for a while an American traveler and investor, thought the comparison incredulous:

> The Rio Colorado is often called "The American Nile;" this name, however, is scarcely applicable to it, although there is a succession of broad valleys subject to periodical overflow, which reach from the end of the Great Canon almost to the end of the Californian Gulf. And a large area of the basin region is in such close proximity to the river, and of so low an elevation, that much of this desert can be converted into a garden by means of irrigating works, similar to those now being formed upon the Isthmus of Suez.[40]

Notwithstanding Bell's objections, the Colorado–Nile connotation was persistently attractive to writers of the booming economies of water management in the Lower Colorado River country, such as in this 1901 item that was wishfully promoting Yuma, Arizona, as a future seaport(!):

> To the eastward is the Arizona desert, to the westward the California desert, to the southward the broad and beautiful river valley itself which has so many points of resemblance to Lower Egypt, that the Colorado may not inaptly be called the American Nile.[41]

Government and academic publications editorially used the term, too, notably those that advocated wholesale irrigation and canalization in the Lower Colorado valley, as for example in 1902:

> When the Colorado is understood and utilized as successfully as is its greater and better known parallel, it will be recognized as the American Nile, the creator of a new country for the irrigator, and Mother of an Occidental Egypt.[42]

Throughout the 20th century and now in the 21st, the Colorado has been in wide literary if not agricultural or hydrological consonance with the Nile. Numerous publications ascertively reiterate the American Nile catchphrase. More modern appearances of the term, though, are generally found only as catchy refrains in popular publications, rather than with marketing goals as like throughout the early 20th-century irrigation literature. In any case, the resemblance is now impossible to defend, extinguished by the exceptional exhaustion of the Colorado's water—the cessation of annual floodings, due to dam controls that preclude the ancient Nile's agricultural functions, and now its very journey to the sea ended by intemperant overuse. Even the Nile, dammed, still reaches the sea.

Two Mile 0s

Refer to illustrations on the next page ▶

BY CONVENTION, mileages on the Colorado River are measured today both up- and downstream from Lees Ferry[44] (see a detailed historical and technical overview by Topping et al., 2003[45]). This was for the purposes of hydrographical measurements, originating with the politically arbitrary division of the Upper Colorado River Basin and the Lower Basin for the purposes of monitoring and apportioning water flows. The division point was officially referred to as "Lee Ferry" (without the "s") for nomenclatural convenience, though that point is downstream from the ferry–proper. "Lee Ferry" never was precisely shown on a map, but its location was described so as to include the Paria River's hydrological contribution to the Colorado into statistical accountings for the Upper Basin.[46]

Due to the methods of tying together the surveys of the hydrographical Upper Colorado and Lower Colorado (surveyed separately in 1921[47] and 1924[48]), there resulted a gap of 0.63 mile between the two respective Mile 0 points. The upstream Mile 0 was positioned at the point referred to today as the Upper Ferry crossing, with a benchmark on the right bank; Mile 0 downstream was at the U.S. Geological Survey's concrete gage well (the gage officially established June 13, 1921) on the left bank just upstream from the mouth of the Paria River.

[44] Lee's Ferry is spelled by the U.S. Board on Geographic Names without an apostrophe, conforming to the board's nearly universal exclusion of such possessive marks. In practical use, however, it appears widely and interchangeably with and without the apostrophe among different authors and editors.

There are no known tables for distances measured from the mouth of the Colorado (Río Colorado in Mexico), nor may such be even practical, given the delta region's disarrayed nature of continually changing river courses and (in the original, pre-dam environments) natural abandonment and establishment of channels.

[46] Article II(e) of the Colorado River Compact of November 24, 1922, states only, "The term 'Lee Ferry' means a point in the main stream of the Colorado River one mile below the mouth of the Paria River." The singular "Lee" seems to have been used rarely, writers instead deferring confusingly to the nearby "Lee's" or "Lees" Ferry. [Thanks to Richard Quartaroli for conversations and ongoing research dealing with "Lee Ferry".]

One River, Ten Dozen Names

THE COLORADO RIVER has been known to the non-Indigenous world since 1539, when Spanish venturers entered the river during an ill-conceived plan to support by ship the overland Coronado entrada. Ever since, the river has appeared in written reports and literary stories, and on maps, in a truly profuse array of names, in many languages (some of them mixed), and with a variety of misspellings (some may have been uninformed, others simply illiterate).

During research on the Grand Canyon and Colorado River bibliographies and cartobibliographies during the past 50-plus years, the following names have been encountered, exactly as found in literature, manuscript, or cartography. Misspellings and inventive presentations are not the result of errors in optical-character interpretation of digitally scanned documents but but are original creations of their own.

This list embraces the entire river from source to sea and is not limited to the Grand Canyon, but it is offered here for the record and for its novelty. Nomenclature not in English or Spanish is further identified.

1 Big Colorado River
2 "big stony river (the Colorado of the West)" [in a work of fiction; presumably taking the name from the Stony Mountains (Rocky Mountains)]
3 Boñaguia R [typographically thus, in French, meaning Buena Guía Rivière for Río de Buena Guía]
4 Caramara flu[vius] [in Latin] [see Rio Coromara]
5 Collerado river [sic]
6 Collorado Fl[usse]. [in German]
7 Colorado de los Martyres
8 Colorado de l'Ouest
9 Colorado del Oeste
10 Colorado (des Westens) [in German]
11 Colorado Grande
12 Colorado-Ouest [in French]
13 Colorado River
14 Colorado River of California
15 Colorado River of Mexico
16 Colorado River of Sonora
17 Colorado River of the Gulf of California
18 Colorado River of the West
19 Colorado River of the West United States

20 Coloratus fl[uvius]. seu Nord-Strom [sic; in mixed Latin and German, translating as Colorado river or North River]
21 Coloredo River [sic]
22 Cotorado R[ivière]. [sic; in French]
23 Firebrand River [in translation of the original Spanish, Río del Tízón; see below]
24 F[iume]. Colorato [sic; in Italian]
25 Fl[usse] Colora de los Martyres [sic; in mixed German and Spanish]
26 Fl[uvius]. boni præsidii [in Latin]
27 f[luvius]. Colerado [sic; in Latin]
28 f[luvius]. Colorado [in Latin]
29 Gran Rio Colorado [and as Gran Río Colorado with diacritical mark]
30 Grand Colorado [applied to the Grand River]
31 le grand fleuve Colorado ou du Nord [in French]
32 le grand rio Colorado [in French]
33 le grand rio Colorado de Californie [in French]
34 Great Colorado
35 Great Colorado of the Pacific
36 Great Colorado River
37 Great Colorado River of the West
38 Great Rio Colorado of California
39 Great River of the Apostles [a conflation of the Gila and lowermost Colorado Rivers as one stream]
40 Green River or Colorado of the Gulf of California [sic]
41 Good Hope River [in English, thus, instead of the Spanish Río de Buena Guía, as a tributary to Tison R.]
42 Martyrs River [and as Martyr's River]
43 Muddy River [a literary liberty]
44 Nord-Strom [North River in German; see Coloratus]
45 North River [not the Rio Grande of the Gulf of Mexico; see Río del Norte]
46 Ouiquintas F[iume]. [in Italian]
47 Red River [also applied to the Little Colorado River*, and at least once in error to the* San Juan River]
48 Red River of California
49 Red River of the West
50 Río Buena Esperanza
51 Rio Colerado [sic]
52 Rio Colorabro [sic]
53 Rio Colorada [sic]
54 Río Colorado
55 Rio Colorado II [in the original source presumably distinguishing it from the Rio Colorado of Texas]
56 Rio Colorado de California
57 Rio Colorado de la California
58 Rio Colorado de las Balzas
59 Rio Colorado de los Estados Unidos por el Norte [sic]
60 Río Colorado de los Martyres

61 Río Colorado de México
62 Río Colorado del Norte [and as Rio Colorado del Norte without diacritical mark]
63 Río Colorado del Occidente [and as Rio Colorado d'Occidente without diacritical mark]
64 Río Colorado del Oeste
65 Rio Colorado del Sur
66 Río Colorado Grande [and as Rio Colorado Grande without diacritical mark]
67 Río Colorado Grande de la California
68 Río Colorado Grande de los Martyres
69 Rio Colorado of California
70 Rio Colorado of the Gulf of California
71 Rio Colorado of the North
72 Rio Colorado or Grand River [sic]
73 Rio Colorado or North River [also as such in translations]
74 Rio Colorado or of the North [sic]
75 Rio Colorado ot Totontoac [sic]
76 Rio Colorado ou R[ivière]. Verde [sic, in French; labeled for the reach between the Bear River (Utah) and Little Colorado River (Arizona)]
77 Rio Colorado (West)
78 R[io] Coralado [although the name seems to conflate Rio Colorado and Rio Coral (Gila River), the river's poor portrayal on the map seen nonetheless is distinct from the similarly poorly portrayed Gila River drainage]
79 Rio Coromara [assumed by contemporary geographers to be that of Marco Polo's river in China; also seen as "R. de Coramara" and as "Caramara flu[vius]."]
80 Rio de Aguchi, ò de Bona Guia [in Italian]
81 Río de Alarcon
82 Río de América Septentrionale
83 Rio de Anguchi [in a Latin source]
84 Rio de Bona Guia [sic]
85 Río de Buena Guía [and as Rio de Bona Guia without the diacritical mark]
86 Rio de Colorado [and as Rio-de-Colorado]
87 Rio de Colorado of California [sic]
88 El río de las Balsas [possibly misapplied to the Río Colorado of this study; also applied to a South American stream and to several locales in Mexico]
89 Río de los Martires
90 Río de los Martyres
91 Río de los Tiburones [sic; in fiction]
92 Río del Norte [applied to the Colorado River, not Rio Grande del Norte*, which is the* Rio Grande of the Gulf of Mexico]
93 Río del Tízón [also with variant contemporary spellings: "Taon", "Teco", "Tecon", "Teçon", "Thicon", "Ticon", "Tiguex", "Tisan", "Tison", "Tocon", "Toucan"]
94 Rio Gran de Colorado [may only be due to awkward map lettering of Rio Grande Colorado]
95 Río Grande [not Rio Grande del Norte*, which is one name for the* Rio Grande of the Gulf of Mexico]
96 Río Grande Colorado

97 Río Grande Colorado de los Martyres [written in a 1710 manuscript, as "Rº. Gᵉ. Colorado de los Martyres"]

98 Río Grande de Buena Esperanza

99 Río Grande de Colorado

100 Río Grande de los Cosninos

101 Rio Green [in Russian, "Рио Грин", meaning "Green River", a label misapplied to the Colorado River]

102 Río Mysterioso

103 Río Totonteac [also as Rio Totonteanc and Rio Tontonteac; see also under "T" below] [Note: Obscure; the name Totonteac usually pertains to a presumed Indigenous "kingdom" [49]]

104 River Colorado

105 Riv[ier]. Colorado of Del Norte [in Dutch]

106 R[ivière]. Colorado ou des Martirs [in French]

107 Rivier de Colarado [sic; in Dutch]

108 rivière de Calorado [sic; in French]

109 Rivière de Coral [in French, the Colorado mislabeled; the label should have been on the Gila River]

110 Roode Rivier Colorado [sic; in Dutch, translating as "Red River Colorado"]

111 Tigna fiume [in Italian, translating as "Ringworm River"]

112 Tontonteanch f[iume]. [in Italian] [see also Río Totonteac]

113 totonan[—] F[luvius] [in Latin but partly illegible in the source seen] [see also Río Totonteac]

114 Totonteac fluvius [in Latin] [see also Río Totonteac]

115 Western Colorado [i.e., the Colorado of the West]

CITATION STYLES USED IN THE BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE COLORADO RIVER IN THE GRAND CANYON

Dellenbaugh, Frederick S. [example of a book citation]

1902 2.2310 The romance of the Colorado River : the story of its discovery in 1540, with an account of the later explorations, and with special reference to the voyages of Powell through the line of the great canyons. New York and London: G. P. Putnam's Sons (The Knickerbocker Press), 399 pp.

► Fully the first half of the book relates to history on the Colorado River earlier than the Powell expeditions.

Powell, John Wesley [example of a citation in Chinese]

2007 2.11953 科罗拉多河探险记 [Ke luo la duo he tan xian ji] [transl. 'The Exploration of the Colorado River and its Canyons']. (雷立美 [Lei Limei], translator.) 广州：花城出版社 [Guangzhou: Hua cheng chu ban she] [Guangzhou, China: Huacheng Publishing House], 380 pp. + [2] pp. advertisements. (三尺书架·第一辑 [San chi shu jia di yi ji] [Three-Foot Bookshelf, Series 1].) [In Chinese.]

► Although the title's translation suggests it is the same as that of Powell's original report (Exploration of the Colorado River . . . , 1875, ITEM NO. 2.5132), this is an abridgment from the 1895 ed., Canyons of the Colorado (ITEM NO. 2.5137), including illustrations. NOTE: Cover illustration imaginatively portrays the expedition in birch bark canoes. Author's name in Chinese orthography: 约翰 韦斯利 鲍威尔 (Yuēhàn Wéi sī lì Bàowēi'ěr).

Each citation in the bibliography has a unique, but arbitrary, serial number referred to herein as an ITEM NUMBER. It is composed of the number of the part of the bibliography in which it is cited, suffixed with a unique number within that part. These are explained more fully in THE GRAND CANON Volume 1/Part A (see the Raven's Perch Media website); and see the next page for a categorical list of ITEM NUMBER prefixes.

An Item Number is assigned when a citation is added to the bibliography, or when a citation is transferred from one part to another, thus the numbers do not follow in order within the alphabetical order of the bibliography's citations. They are not reused if a citation is removed from a part either by deletion or transfer to another part (and there renumbered). Item Numbers were first created for the Internet Edition interactive database (2000); they did not appear in the 1981 and 1990/1993 print editions of the bibliography.

Citations for works that are not in English note the language in red print, usually at the end of the citation. For those not in Roman orthography (like this example in Chinese orthography), followed by a transliteration (in gray print) and a translation ("transl." in dark red print) are also provided for various components. (The color schemes, used only for visual convenience, are used for other similar elements within a translated citation.) Other non-English languages are also provided in translation in this bibliography (with "transl." prefix).

Annotations (some of them may be lengthy) can be helpful toward locating specific information within the publication that might not be obvious in a regularly composed citation, or may provide further bibliographical data, contextual information, or special comments.

KEY TO ITEM NUMBERS USED IN THIS BIBLIOGRAPHY

1869 (2.14351) Voyage through the Grand Canon of Colorado [sic]. In: Reviews [SECTION]. American Naturalist, 2(12) (February): 655-656.

Throughout this bibliography the unique Item Numbers applied to each citation are from the master bibliography, THE GRAND CANON Volume 1/Part B (5th edition, 2025, plus additional citations acquired since January 2025 in the Cumulative Supplement). In themselves, the Item Numbers are not important to the historical perspective of the citations in this bibliography. They are serial numbers only, which were first applied in the bibliography in the 1990s to distinctively identify citations. The numbers are also used to unambiguously cross-reference other citations in the bibliography. The prefixes (for example, "2.") indicate the subject-specific part of the master bibliography (see the list below for those used in the present bibliography). The suffixed numbers begin with 1 within each part. In a few instances, just one or a couple of citations from a category are cited in this Colorado River bibliography.

Part numbers not listed are not pertinent to this bibliography

The main part of this Colorado River bibliography (the section titled "Along the River") incorporates pertinent citations from Parts 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 14 (specially selected), 15 (selected incidents or reports), 16 (specially selected), 17 (specially selected), 18 (specially selected), 24 (specially selected), 26, 27, and 28 (specially selected).

The separate bibliographical list herein for Colorado River Guides is taken from Part 10, with a selection of geological maps taken from Part 24. The separate bibliographical list for material of Administrative Perspectives on the Colorado River in Grand Canyon National Park is taken from Part 13. The separate bibliographical list for material relating to Hydraulics and Hydrogeology is taken from Part 22. The separate bibliographical list for Other Bibliographies is taken from Part 1.

With the exception of the section on Hydraulics and Hydrogeology, a very large number of scientific and technical publications that report on work conducted on the Colorado River through Grand Canyon are omitted from this special bibliography that focuses on the more human aspects of "adventure, recreation, and activity." For these other topics, refer as needed to Parts 16 (Archaeology and Cultural Resources), 18 (Physical Environment), 19 (Biology and Ecology), and 21 (Geology) in THE GRAND CANON Volume 1/Part B (the latest edition published in 2025) and in the Cumulative Supplement (first published in 2026). Further, Raven's Perch Media offers a number of specialized environmentally, ecologically, and biologically focused bibliographies (https://ravensperch.org/specialized-bibliographies/) (see also on the Raven's Perch Media website the occasionally updated Publications List (https://ravensperch.org/publications-list).

Editorial note: Many of the citations herein are augmented with notes and annotations. In quoting material, one of two notations may be appended, "(ENTIRE NOTE)" or "(ENTIRE ITEM)". The former notation indicates that the quoted material is all that pertains to this bibliography, from an item that is longer; the latter notation indicates that it is the whole of the cited item. Quotations are added for their informational value, but also to avoid the need for a reader to investigate whether there is additional pertinent material beyond that of the excerpts.

ABOUT DIGITAL RESOURCES IN THIS BIBLIOGRAPHY

Publications that are available only as unpaginated digital downloads (continuous scrolling, such as ebooks) are not included in the bibliography, nor are materials available only through online streaming services or web-accessed podcasts.

Resources that are exclusively web-based cannot be guaranteed to survive indefinitely, in the manner of printed publications. Material in such documents also cannot be cited in such a way that allows future researchers to re-locate that information with precision, in the same fashion as citing page numbers.

PDF [Portable Document Format] items designed as if they are printed publications are cited in this bibliography. The determining criteria are that publications must be formatted in uniquely citeable issues, and that copies printed from the PDF will be uniform, thus information cited by page can be reliably found. An assumption is also made that printed or digitally stored copies might be available somewhere in future times, regardless of the medium.

When a publisher has produced a publication in both print and digital versions, this bibliography defers to the print version because the digital version may not be permanently available. Occasionally, only URLs [Uniform Resource Locator, usually with http:, https:, or doi: prefixes] were available at the time of compilation; these are cited for the record, though when a publication appears later in print the citation may be rewritten to accommodate that information.

Some scientific papers are complemented by supplementary information that is accessible only online. The URLs for these supplemental data are cited along with main item, though with no assurance that it will be present in those web-based locations in the future.

PICTORIAL PRELUDE

Surveying Lava Falls – 1872, 1988

► Refers to "narrow canyons" of western rivers. "These fissures have not been scooped out by the watercourses, but are apparently the result of some titanic convulsion of nature which has rent the mountains asunder, and made a highway for the rivers to pass through. Of all these remarkable natural curiosities none exceeds in grandeur or extent the great Canyon of the Colorado, a region as little known to science as the interior of Africa, or the neighborhood of the North Pole. [. . .] On our best maps much of its [the Colorado River's] route is still a blank space; but a scientific party, mostly young men from Illinois, headed by professor Powell, is now on an exploring expedition, partly to enlarge their knowledge and recruit their health, but mainly to solve the mystery of the Upper Colorado and its wonderful canyon, by attempting to pass through it in boats or rafts—a passage which has as yet only been successfully accomplished by one man, whose adventures in the gorge form one of the most fascinating stories of peril and hair-breadth escapes we ever remember reading." [Transl.: 400 miles—gold. This refers to English miles, yet the find is colossal, according to a New York telegram published in the Sunday Times on the 26th of last month: “People are rushing from all parts of the country to the Grand Canyon on the Colorado River. Colonel Stanton, a member of a recent expedition, reports that the canyon is filled with gold along a stretch of 400 miles. It protrudes from the canyon walls and can be picked up there just like pebbles. Immense deposits of coal and marble are also reported. ► "The Grand Canon of the Colorado, and most remarkable in the United States, extends down the river from the mouth of the Little Colorado, a distance of more than 200 miles. The channel is from fifty to three hundred feet in width, and the descent of the river from fifty to two hundred feet to the mile. In places the cliffs or walls are broken down in steep slopes; other places are terraced on a grand scale, the glacis often being from a mile to a mile and a half in width, and the step to a higher terrace several hundred feet. In 1869 a corps, fitted out by the United States government, under command of Prof. W. J. Powell [sic], started in boats from Green River City, in Southwestern Wyoming, and safely threaded the devious paths of the canons as far as the mouth of the Grand Wash, a distance of 1,000 miles. Throughout this entire distance there are but a few miles where the river is not deep in the bowels of the earth. The views are grand and impressive. The mighty walls of rock, rising like some huge fortress from the water's edge, with bastion and battlement, tower far above. The height varies from 4,000 to 7,000 feet. One thousand feet of this is up through granite crags , then steep slopes and perpendicular cliffs, one above another, to the summit." (ENTIRE ITEM)

► A confused perspective. "Irving E. Bush, a mining engineer of Los Angeles, proposes, if he can raise the money, to dam the Colorado river in northern Arizona, near the Nevada border, where the walls of Grand Canyon are only 250 feet apart. The cost would be $2,000,000, and the object is irrigation and electric power. The walls of the canyon at the site of the proposed dam rise 4,000 feet above low water mark, and the project contemplates a dam 700 feet high. This would cause backwater for a distance of fifty-five miles above, and it is claimed would make the greatest water power in the world. The lake would be more than a mile wide, and until filled with silt, be an average depth of 350 feet. The promoters of the project claim that the dam would generate 1,500,000 electric horsepower for less than one-fourth of present cost. The power would be used priincipally in the reduction of low-grade gold and copper ores found n Arizona, Nevada, and California, southward. The site of the proposed dam is many miles west of the Santa Fe Railway's Grand Canyon station." (ENTIRE ITEM)

► "In natural wonders America leads the world. With its Niagara Falls, Yellowstone Park, Yosemite Valley and Grand Canyon, no other country on earth approaches it. Perhaps the grandest of all of these natural wonders is the Grand Canyon. This volume with its forty-eight full-page plates, describes the Grand Canyon form Wyoming to Mexico, giving special emphasis to the Canyon in Arizona. The descriptions are full of beauty and eloquence, and yet they are valuable for their scientic exactness. The illustrations add greatly to the value of the book. The book is beautifully bound and is delivered by the publishers in a box which safeguards it for mailing." (ENTIRE ITEM) Cover illustration, "In the Grand Canyon", depicts the often-reprinted view of the Kolb brothers at work, with one brother suspended by a rope across a prominent gap while the other brother straddles the supporting log (a view more recently colloquially referred to as "Kolb on a Rope"; though this was a canyon-rim view, see C. V. Abyssus, "Kolb on a Rope", Boatman's Quarterly Review, 27(3) (Fall 2014): 9-11, an article which locates the scene).

[1] * Regarding the December reviews and notices for Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico, one must wonder whether these were taken from a Macmillan press release, and why obvious misnomers of earlier Colorado River expeditions are sometimes included. Also, it is apparent that the notices were either delayed (the first two editions of Kolb's book were published in October) or, more likely, were taken from Christmas-sales announcements for the 48-plate boxed third edition to be published in December (see also the Appendix herein, "Variants of E. L. Kolb's Through the Grand Canyon From Wyoming to Mexico" by R. D. Quartaroli, which appears the Appendix).

Answers include: "Yes; the journey was made through in a skiff. Write Kolb Brorthers, Photographers, Grand Canon, Arizona, for information. I believe, though, that for a pleasure trip you'll find it better to start much lower down", between The Needles to Yuma; "Few make the trip, even from The Needles to Yuma", with small game and "Very little fishing" and "I would suggest you secure Major Powell's narrative of his trip through the Canon"; and travel during "October, November, to February and March". Answers end with the note that "the gorge trip is much too dangerous for sport or pleasure. They [Kolb brothers] would tell you the place to start for the upper navigable reaches."

► Regarding the (never-released) silent film shot on location during the Pathé-Bray Colorado River Expedition in Grand Canyon (see Pathé Exchange, 1928, ITEM NO. 26.1367). The reviewer is moved by the canyon moreso than the plot: "The Grand Canyon of the Colorado River plays the lead in this picture. It makes a beautiful spectacle and a desperate menace, but does not lend itself to real story interest. In fact, the characters and the plot are absolutely incidental to the cathedral cliffs, the whirling rapids and other stupendous beauties of the canyon. John Boles and Donal Blossom, a newcomer to pictures, have some intimate love scenes, but even here it is the background which interests." (ENTIRE ITEM) NOTE: The reference to "De Mille"

A special receiver was built for the expedition [Birdseye Expedition] by the Bureau of Standards which was carried on a geological survey of the Canyon under the auspices of the United States Geological Survey. This illustration is from a photograph by Lewis R. Freeman, of the Explorers Club, New York, who was a member of the expedition. Mr. Freeman explains that at the time the expedition was undertaken there was some doubt as to whether radio reception would be possible in the Canyon. It was conclusively demonstrated that excellent reception was possible. The receiver performed as well at depths of 500 feet as at 5000, Mr. Freeman says. The antenna in the illustration also, it seems, served the party as a clothesline." (ENTIRE ITEM)

1982 15.728 Grand Canyon NP. In: Park Briefs [SECTION]. Courier (U.S. National Park Service), 5(2) (February): 13.

► "A jet-driven motor boat carrying three people capsized and sank in the Colorado River Dec. 2. Two of the passengers—Michael Reese and Barbara Theunissen were rescued by park rangers—and a third, Terry Evans was missing and presumed drowned. The three were affiliated with the University of Nevada and were conducting water quality research for the Bureau of Reclamation. A massive search for the missing boatman, including helicopters, boats and ground crews, proved fruitless." (ENTIRE ITEM)

1982 15.729 Grand Canyon NP. In: Park Briefs [SECTION]. Courier (U.S. National Park Service), 5(3) (March): 12.

► "Phantom Ranch, closed for more than a year, has re-opened to visitors after the installation of a new sewage system. The Arizona Public Health Service ordered the lodge be closed, citing its overloaded and outdated septic system. Many difficulties were encountered in completing the work due to the location of the site at the bottom of the canyon. Heavy equipment, trucks, backhoe and a bulldozer were rafted down the Colorado more than 90 miles to the site. Cement came in by helicopter." (ENTIRE ITEM)

2001 2.8517 A daring voyage down the Grand Canyon. Boatman's Quarterly Review, 14(4) (Winter 2001-2002): 4-9, 52.

► Introduced with the following statement: "A few years back the bqr printed a short 1910 essay by George Wharton James, detailing the 1908 voyage of Charles Russell and Edwin Monett through Grand Canyon. By the way it was written, it appeared James had intimate acquaintance with the two boaters in his story. Now a longer and more complete 1909 story has come to light, written by David Allen and published in the British magazine Wide World in November 1908—a story George Wharton James must have seen, for several of his descriptions were lifted bodily from this earlier work. We now print the original tale here in its entirety, along with a few additional images of the trip that have recently come to light." 1996 2.1332 [Regarding the theft of "Tikki's" journal.] In: In the mail [FEATURE]. Boatman's Quarterly Review, 9(3): 4.

► Tiki's journal, cached at Mile 114.0 Right. "I'm wondering if others have been saddened by the loss of Tikki's [sic] joumal at upper 114 mile camp. I was so saddened when I camped there last trip and went up to find the rusted coffee can that always held a chance to get closer to life through Tikki's death. The can and the journal were gone. I can only hope it was her mother who moved them or took them. To anyone else who felt the joumal was theirs to take, it was an awful thing to do, both to Tikki and to those who have read and will read it. The joumal belongs to the Canyon—please return it." (ENTIRE ITEM) About Tiki (Charlotte West Galt, 1951-1971), see Reid (1995, ITEM NO. 2.31470).

2010 2.15014 Spirit unbroken. Boatman's Quarterly Review, 23(4) (Winter 2010-2011): 15-17.

► Regarding Bartlett's introduction in 1984 to the cache at Mile 114.0 Right that contained "The Journal of Tiki Galt . . . a collection of poems and reflections that struck me to the core." Includes remarks concerning Tiki and her journal that had been stolen (see Bartlett, 1996, ITEM NO. 2.1332) along with "more than a hundred personal notes nested in the bottom of the can addressing the journal's author".

"Her name was Charlotte 'Tiki' West Galt who lived from 1951–1971 but never saw the Grand Canyon. She died from Hodgkins Disease at twenty years old. It was her closest aunt, Charlotte Reid (1922–1997), who traveled through the Canyon in 1972 or 1973 with Western River Expeditions with Jack Curry and Jake Luck as her guides. Charlotte had compiled Tiki's words into a small hand-bound book and wanted to leave this journal in memory of Tiki somewhere in this Canyon that had moved her so much. [. . .] "[In 1998] when I returned to the Canyon and the Inner Gorge, I had a new journal in a water-tight Tupperware ready to be placed in the same cave where so many years ago Peter Weiss had sent me to find the coffee can. To create a spirit similar to the original, I left a letter explaining why the new copy of the original journal was there, and the power of the accompanying notes that were now lost. I hoped this replacement would at least hold some of Tiki's legacy in the place her aunt had intended." Concludes with comments concerning the possible rediscovery of the original journal in a more remote location nearby, though Bartlett was unable to locate it.

About Tiki, see Reid (1995, ITEM NO. 2.31470). NOTE: Earle Spamer and Richard Quartaroli visited the site on August 23, 1997, when Spamer photographed the few pages of the replacement journal (note the discrepancy with the date mentioned by Bartlett regarding when the replacement had been placed there). In July 2023, Spamer digitally corrected the overexposed transparencies, and a digital file copy was given to the Grand Canyon National Park Museum Collection. (Bartlett also mentions that the replacement was in a piece of Tupperware; but Spamer and Quartaroli found it rolled up in a plastic water bottle, also photographed. The "letter" is actually a handwritten note on one of the computer-printed leaves.)

From Lees Ferry to the Whitmore helipad, our crew shepherded sixteen passengers through whitewater rapids, up steep side canyons, and into hidden waterfalls. It was utter bliss—even in 115 degrees of desert heat. The journal that follows was drawn freehand during the ten days I was with the crew, then watercolored upon my return to Portland." (p. [2]).

1924 2.33034 Surveys of the Grand Canyon. In: Items of Interest [SECTION]. American Society of Civil Engineers, Proceedings, 50(2) (February): 61.

► Begins with an editorial introduction, regarding the recently completed Birdseye Expedition through the Grand Canyon; "William H. Bush, M. Am. Soc. C. E., is authority for information regarding his experience more than thirty years ago with this treacherous stream." Notes Bush's experience with the Stanton Expedition, "reported in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch" (date not indicated). His related experience pertained to the quitting of the Stanton survey in Glen Canyon, after the loss of boats leaving two to continue onward, caching their equipment. "It was late in July when we found a place to land, Lees Ferry, where the Mormons crossed. We dragged the boat ashore and threw ourselves on the sand to sleep. [¶] I learned later that the eight others had passed Lees Ferry and that Banker Brown and three others had drowned when the boat capsized. The five men with me were all alive, but when we awoke on the sand at Lees Ferry the next morning one of them was raving mad.

[¶] All we had left was the clothing on our backs, no water and no food. In a bag around my neck I carried a teaspoonful of flake gold which I had taken from a stream which poured into the canyon [farther upstream], and a five dollar bill. For seven days we tramped across the desert without food, constantly guarding the maniac, until almost dead, we literally crawled into the frontier town of Flagstaff, Ariz."

I have not seen this Grand Cañon, but I have spoken with many who have explored it as far as they could get. They say that it would be as possible to shoot Niagara and live, as to descend the Colorado." [with associated footnote:] "A book has been published in which a circumstantial account of the descent of the Colorado by a miner on a raft. Certain recorded events appeared inconsistent with each other, and I suppose that the story is mythical."

► Crime-drama plot concerns the death of a newspaper publisher in a rafting accident in Canada. Footage of rafts in rapids begins the episode.

NOTE: Members of the Colorado River discussion group, "Clio" (January 2021), have identified the footage, which is not credited in the episode, as filmed on the Colorado River in Grand Canyon. Two different clips are shown in sequence, implying a single event; the first shows a boat in a rapid, which in fact may be separate events, one of which is one of P. T. Reilly's boats hitting the hole in Upset Rapid; the second part of the footage shows a boat flipping in a rapid, which is Moulty Fulmer in the GEM on the extreme left side of Horn Creek Rapid.

► Under "Water Power in Arizona" (all figures and geographical notes thus): "The Grand Canyon of Arizona affords the greatest field for electricity generated by water power. Below the new Santa Fe Hotel on the canyon brink are Indian Garden Springs, which in ordinary seasons have a flow of nearly one hundred inches, that can be thrown over a cliff 3000 feet high. In Cataract canyon the stream of flow, usually approximating 10,000 inches, makes three great leaps of 70, 144 and 250 feet, respectively, without reference to several thousand feet of drop from the Indian villages to the Colorado's channel. Many plans have been mooted for developing the marvelous power of the Colorado, a stream which rises as much as 100 feet in flood time within the canyon. Floats equipped with great paddle wheels have been suggested, but it is probable that the river will some day be harnessed by means of tunnels that will 'pick up' the fall of the stream. One such tunnel at a point near Bass's Trail, and not over a half mile in length, driven through black granite, would cut off twelve miles of river channel averaging not less than twelve feet of fall to the mile. [¶] Dr. A. J. Chandler of Mesa, Ariz., is engineering the latest Grand Canyon power plant. [. . .] He has found an ideal location for power generating works within Kanab, Wash., [sic] not far from its union with the inner canyon of the Colorado, about seventy miles north of Williams. It is believed that even 5000 feet of fall can be found in a distance of a little over a mile. The water supply is said to be ample, and of remarkable regularity of flow. The only quesiton seems to be that involving the carriage of the necessary heavy machinery down into the canyon and across the river, unless it be hauled southward from some Utah railroad point and lowered over the awful cliffs."

► About the Grand Canyon speed run of the Emerald Mile, as written about by Kevin Fedarko. This is a roughly disjointed text, belying the use of Artificial Intelligence, including an apparently contrived personal "Acknowledgment" section that credits in part "the waterway guides" of "the Great Gorge". The contrived cover illustration shows a person rowing a boat that is not the Emerald Mile, through a small rapid on a canyon river that is not the Grand Canyon. The boater is rowing bow first, though facing upstream such as when rowing an ordinary rowboat; they lack a right arm, while the left arm, if it is shown, hangs straight; and the oars have no oarlocks!

A 3rd printing "did not have a boat embossed on the cover, but had top edge gilt. No Clyde Eddy books ever had top edge gilt." This 3rd printing also had navy blue boards and was "signed by the author on September 21, 1934, with a tipped-in, typed, inscription to DR. H.A.B. Dunning, who the book was originally dedicated to. Also hand written, 'printed on rag paper'." It might have been a one-of-a-kind copy, thus other such productions may exist.]

Eggert, Charles

1955 26.1370 A canyon voyage. Barrytown, New York: Adventurama Productions. 16-mm film. 61:00.

► Adventure and documentary film made during a 1955 expedition on the Green and Colorado Rivers, to Lees Ferry, to retrace the Powell Expedition and to document the rivers prior to the construction of dams. It was intended to continue through Grand Canyon but low water levels made it impractical at that time (but see Eggert, 1956, Danger River, ITEM NO. 26.1371); nonetheless, a bit about Grand Canyon is included. The film was made available through in-person programs contracted through National Artists Corp., New York. A Canyon Voyage premiered at the Cosmos Club, Washington, D.C. Film length as cited here given by Marriott Library, University of Utah, from the digitized file of the 16-mm film (correspondence, 22 July 2020). See also the companion book, Eggert (2020, ITEM NO. 2.29520).

NOTE: The Marriott Library also holds a VHS copy of the films in question, in the Hatch River Expeditions video collection, which are noted there to have a combined time of 1:39:15. There is also "a 1960s edited version [of both films together] with Charles Eggert's commentary on the making of the films and how they were re-cut and edited to use during the fight over dams in the Grand Canyon in the 1960s. 48:102 [sic, 48:10]."

1956 26.1371 Danger River. Barrytown, New York: Adventurama Productions. 16-mm film. 20:00.

► Adventure and documentary film made during a 1956 expedition on the Colorado River through Grand Canyon, completing the project begun with A Canyon Voyage (Eggert, 1955, ITEM NO. 26.1370). The film was made available through in-person programs contracted through National Artists Corp., New York. Film length as cited here given by Marriott Library, University of Utah, from the digitized file of the 16-mm film (correspondence, 22 July 2020). See also the companion book, Eggert (2020, ITEM NO. 2.29520).

► Eggert's name as Director of Motion Pictures shown in list of officers of the National Parks Association (inside back cover). See "Grand Canyon River Trip" (pp. 124-125), brief remarks regarding a trip that began at Lees Ferry on June 11, 1956; and see "Film Lectures", which notes, "In December I resumed my lectures with A Canyon Voyage. ► With "Acknowledgments" by Sebastian Eggert (pp. xi-xv), "Foreword" by Roy Webb (pp. xvii-xxvi), "Introduction" by Alfred E. Holland, Jr. (pp. 1-31), "Endnotes" by Roy Webb (pp. 327-342, credited p. viii), and "Afterword : After the River" by Sarah McDaniel Holcombe (pp. 343-353). Principally about a 1955 expedition to retrace the Powell Expedition and document the rivers before the construction of dams, creating Eggert's film, A Canyon Voyage. Text focuses on the Upper Colorado River Basin; but see the conclusion of Chapter 27, "Rainbow Bridge to Lee's Ferry (pp. 303-319); and Chapter 28, "L'envoi—Grand Canyon" (pp. 320-325), concerning a 1956 trip, during which was created the sequel film, Danger River. The section of color photos is from the 1956 Grand Canyon trip. The films are cited separately in this bibliography: A Canyon Voyage (Eggert, 1955, ITEM NO. 26.1370); Danger River (Eggert, 1956, ITEM NO. 26.1371).

► Written as if non-fiction, this is the telling of a passage through Grand Canyon on the Colorado River made by "George Robinson" in 1867; seemingly fictionalized based on the James White affair. Robinson, said to have been with Ellbrace before his adventure, is noted to have conveyed this record when Ellbrace reencountered the presumably lost Robinson just prior to the 1869 Powell expedition. Ellbrace concludes (p. 335): "Thus Robinson ended a story, which, as he said himself, seemed incredible. But it can, I believe, be substantially verified by the records of Fort Mohave during the summer of 1867." Includes contrived illustrations.

1923 2.32838 In the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. The Farmer's Advocate and Home Magazine (London, Ontario), 58(1629) (December 13): 1774, 1828.

► Written phonetically in a Canadian-Scottish brogue. Includes a mounted trip to the Colorado River, with a Kolb photo (not credited), "Sandy is Fourth from the Rear in this Mule Train". (Sandy is a man.) An example of the writing (inserted here for it's unusual delivery) as they reach the river (p. 1828): "It seemed as though we were never gaein' tae reach the bottom o' this hole we had got into, but after about three hours and a half o' crawling and sliding we made it oot. Juist aboot twelve o'clock we arrived at what some poet or ither has called the 'Silvery Colorado.' It's a wee river, not mair than aboot three hundred feet wide, but it is this same river that has washed oot the whole o' the Grand Canyon. And it's still at wark on the job, for it's that muddy that a pail o' the water will show aboot four inches o' ground at the bottom, after it has been allowed tae settle. There's naething 'silvery' aboot it that I could see."

Garland, Hamlin

1940 8.826 The stricken pioneer. The Rotarian, 56(5) (June): 6. [Verse.]

► This poem is noted by Garland (1930, Roadside meetings [The Macmillan Co., New York], a collection of stories about famous people) to have been written after having met the infirm John Wesley Powell and which commemorates Powell and Garland's similarly infirm Uncle William. The 1930 printing comprises three stanzas that do not specifically mention these men. The Rotarian printing (here) comprises six stanzas—three additional stanzas preceding those that were printed in 1930, and with edits to the final three stanzas as compared to the 1930 printing. The newer (first three) stanzas likewise do not mention the men by name, but the third stanza in this now-longer version does recall "The mightiest canyon of the earth / he conquered [. . .] [he now] taking no part / In all the explorations of the West." (The Rotarian version does not include any part of the prose introductory notes that appeared in the 1930 printing.)

This is a story of a miracle that happened on a summer river trip in the Grand Canyon in 1998. The accident occurs on the second to last day of a six-day trip down the river, in a side canyon named Havasu. This account is written from two points of view. The first is from the rescuer (Tiffany George) and the second is by the victim (Sylvia Leimkuehler)."

1922 6.1373 (ED.) In den Tälern des Todes : die abenteuerliche Erforschung der Wunderwelt am Colorado durch J. W. Powell [transl. 'In the Valleys of Death: J. W. Powell's adventurous exploration of the wonders of the Colorado River']. Dresden: Verlag Deutsche Buchwerkstätten, 176 pp., plates. (Jäger und Forscher [transl. Hunters and Explorers (series)].) [Colophon, "Zeilenguß-Maschinensatz und Druck von Oscar Brandstetter, Leipzig" (p. [2], i.e. half-title page verso).] [In German.]

► A novelized, free translation for young readers of John Wesley Powell's report of explorations, credited to "The Colorado River of the West and its tributaries" (p. 8); i.e., Powell (1875, ITEM NO. 2.5132).

The plates and engravings throughout the volume, including that of the dust jacket illustration, are redrawn from Powell and other sources, with fanciful embellishments to highlight action and situations in the text.

POINTS (comparisons to illustrations in Powell (1875) are added here in red italics): Dust jacket colored illustration portrays three Indians with weapons menacing three men thrown from a boat in a rapid, and in the distance a second boat heads into the top of the rapid (this illustration is after Powell's Figure 1 (frontispiece), "The Grand Cañon of the Colorado", with the boat at the top of the rapid resembling the one in Powell's Figure 28 facing p. 82, "Running a rapid"). Title and publisher's name above and below dust jacket illustration in black ornamental block capitals; on dust jacket spine series title and volume title in light-blue upper- and lower-case Fraktur. White cloth with white paste-down sheet, with ornamental title and editor's name in blue and red block capitals; ornamental spine with editor's surname and volume title in blue block capitals. Copyright notice at bottom of title-page verso.

ORNAMENTAL ILLUSTRATIONS (ENGRAVINGS): pp. 9 top (landscape scene) (apparently after Powell's Figure 60 facing p. 167, "Alcove-Lands and Bad-Lands south of the Uinta Mountains"), 21 bottom (two bears), 41 bottom (Indian in headdress), 61 bottom (prickly pear-like cactus), 80 bottom (three men in boat passing over top of steep waterfall), 129 bottom (two saguaro cacti and other desert vegetation). Non-ornamental illustrations: Photograph of the editor, with signature (frontispiece recto), "Abfahrt von Green River City" (lithograph, frontispiece verso) (after Powell's Figure 4 facing p. 8, "The start from Green River Station"); engraving of John Wesley Powell, with signature (p. [5]); map (p. [6]) depicts "Marschroute" from Green River, Wyoming, to Camp Yuma, California, and Arizona City, Arizona [sic]; "Pa-ri-ats" (engraving, p. 29) (after Powell's Figure 45 facing p. 123, "The Human Pickle", and not Powell's Figure 7 facing p. 17, "Pa'-ri-ats"); "Die Indianer des Häuptlings Pa-ri-ats überfallen Powell, um ihn zurückzuführen" (lithograph, plate between pp. 72/73, recto [which portrays Powell with two hands!]) (contrived for this volume), "Die „Medizinfrau" der Indianer pflegt den verwundeten Powell" (plate verso) (contrived for this volume); "In der Hölle des „Gips-Cañon"" (lithograph, plate between pp. 152/153, recto) (after Powell's Figure 21 facing p. 64, "Water basin in Gypsum Cañon"), "Aufftieg vom alten Azteken-Pueblo zum Rande des Cañons" (plate verso) (after Powell's Figure 34 facing p. 98, "Climbing the Grand Cañon"); "Naturdenkmal im Marble-Cañon" (lithograph, plate between pp. 168/169, recto) (after Powell's Figure 24 facing p. 73, "Island Monument in Glen Cañon"), "Indianerlager am „Großen-Cañon"" (plate verso) (after Powell's Figure 41 facing p. 174, "U-nu'-pin Pi-ka'-vu or Elfin Water Pocket").

1951 2.20185 Just Between You and Me [COLUMN]. Desert Magazine, 14(14) (December): 42.

► Notes the visit to the Desert Magazine office of Otis Marston and his wife, Margaret. Remarks on motor-powered trips on the Colorado River, but the author prefers the oar-powered trips such as those of Norman Nevills. "Just why anyone should want to race through those gorgeous canyons at break-neck speed is beyond my ken."

1954 2.20248 Just Between You and Me [COLUMN]. Desert Magazine, 17(9) (September): 42.

► Includes note on drought-induced low flows curtailing river trips. Notes, "The only chartered expedition to go through Grand Canyon was one piloted by Georgia White [Georgie White] and her husband, 'Whitey.' They took three rubber life rafts with 10 passengers from Lee's Ferry to Boulder City in 21 days—making portages where there was not enough water to take loaded boats through the rocks exposed in the rapids."

► Begins with remarks on the Petrified Forest, but is principally about Grand Canyon. Includes the notable statement (p. 1031/7) (among other misstatements): "It is not strange, then, that men should be afraid of these awful depths, which dispute any one's right to enter them. Only two successful expeditions have ever been made the entire length of the canyon, and even the leaders of these, Major Powell and Mr. Stanton, were once and again dragged by their men from the water after losing consciousness."

1995 2.3555 Wild river, timeless canyons : Balduin Möllhausen's watercolors of the Colorado. Fort Worth, Texas: Amon Carter Museum (distributed by University of Arizona Press, Tucson), 232 pp.

► Note added by Spamer: Although Möllhausen, accompanying the Ives expedition of 1858, did not travel on the Colorado River in Grand Canyon, he was the first to depict (in watercolor) a Colorado River rapid in Grand Canyon, at the mouth of Diamond Creek. These original paintings are reproduced in Huseman, p. 121 (a view downstream from a location on the upstream side of the confluence) and p. 122 (a view upstream from a location on the downstream side of the confluence). The original paintings can be viewed online at the Amon Carter Museum of Western Art (Fort Worth, Texas): the downstream view is https://www.cartermuseum.org/collection/cottonwood-valley-1988133 (mislabeled online "Cottonwood Valley"); the upstream view is https://www.cartermuseum.org/collection/mouth-diamond-creek-colorado-river-view-south-1988136 (both last accessed 30 October 2025).

Möllhausen used the latter (upstream) view for a chromolithograph in his account of the Ives expedition, published in Germany, Reisen in die Felsengebirge Nord-Amerikas bis zum Hoch-Plateau von Neu-Mexico, unternommen als Mitglied der im Auftrage der Regierung der Vereinigten Staaten ausgesandten Colorado-Expedition [transl. Travels into the Rocky Mountains of North America to the High Plateau of New Mexico, undertaken as a member of the Colorado Expedition on behalf of the United States Government] (Hermann Costenoble, Leipzig, 1861), Zweiter Band [volume 2], facing p. 54 ("Der Rio Colorado, nahe der Mündung des Diamant-Baches" [transl. The Rio Colorado, near the mouth of Diamond Creek]). There also was an undated [1860?] edition from Otto Purfürst [Leipzig]. Regarding the two imprints, see Earle E. Spamer, The Leipzig Imprints of Balduin Möllhausen's Reisen in die Felsengebirge Nord-Amerikas bis zum Hoch-Plateau von Neu-Mexico (1860, 1861): Bibliographical Notes (Raven's Perch Media, 2022), 20 pp., 2 MB PDF online at https://ravensperch.org/wp-content/uploads/2022/11/Mollhausen_Reisen_notes.pdf (also a third-party flip book accessible at https://online.fliphtml5.com/ryvqb/jtvi/) (URLs valid as of 1 November 2025). The "Bibliographical Notes" publication analyzes the dates of publication and advertisement of Möllhausen's narrative of the Ives Expedition, which preceded by months at least the publication of Lt. J. C. Ives' 1861 formal report of the expedition.

1930 2.31048 [Remarks on the second Powell expedition.] In: Contributions to Western Botany, No. 17. Claremont, California: [no imprint] [Marcus E. Jones], p. 37.

► Scarce enough to reprint in its entirety:

"In June, 1929, I visited El Tobar [sic] on the southern side of the Grand Canon and saw the stately monument erected to Major Powell and the band of Government men who accompanied him down the Colorado river in 1871, on that blood curdling trip. The secrecy that has always surrounded that trip and his work surveying the Grand Canon has always been a puzzle to me. Forty years ago or more I made the acquaintance of one of his party, the topographer, Captain F. M. Bishop of Salt Lake City, and he was a fellow townsman for many years till my removal to California. His herbarium made on that expedition has always been in my own collection, all the types not now at Harvard.

"On the visit referred to I failed to see his name among the list of those who traversed the Grand Canon, and for this reason I hunted him up, now a very old man, at Salt Lake, and conferred with him about the matter. During the conversation his daughter showed me a transcript of his diary, fragmentary but complete as far as it went, which throws a flood of light on the expedition, and its asinine management. I borrowed the M.S. and have copied it, and some day, may possibly publish it. Captain Bishop was one of the very few educated men in the party, and was the center of the botanical activity, making the best collection, but Mrs. Thompson, the sister of Major Powell [Ellen Louella "Nellie" Powell], sent her collections to Harvard independently. Captain Bishop was later the Professor of Botany at the State University in Salt Lake City." (ENTIRE ITEM)

1 NOTE regarding E. L. Kolb's Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico: Variants of this title are cited separately herein. The Macmillan variants of this publication, 1914-1971, hold the second-longest documented record of a Grand Canyon–Colorado River title continously in print, appearing in 27 editions/printings under the Macmillan imprint (Quartaroli variants A-AA), 57 years. Because it is not clear how long Macmillan sold copies itself (in later years Emery Kolb was essentially the principal outlet for sales, at Grand Canyon), it was likely continuously available for 62 years, until Emery's death in 1976. The disposition of remaining copies in Kolb's possession upon his death is not known, and it is not clear that the work was available from Macmillan thereafter (fide Richard D. Quartaroli). The Quartaroli variants A–FF, which include established reprintings following the Macmillan years, are itemized in the APPENDIX to the present bibliography. More recent reprintings published on demand by various producers (see undated ones listed first, and dated ones within the citations after 1971) are not assigned variant identifications by Quartaroli.

► First state. Quartaroli variant BB. This is a facsimile reprint of the October 1914 Macmillan edition (Quartaroli variant A), containing Wister's original (unaltered) foreword but miscrediting and misspelling the author as Emory Kolb. The reprint is, however, not completely faithful to either of the October 1914 states, omitting some illustrations. There are two states to the University of Arizona reprint, Quartaroli variants BB and CC, as noted with more complete information in the APPENDIX to the present bibliography.

1989 2.3924 Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico. (Foreword by Owen Wister, new preface by Barry Goldwater; "Photographs by the Author and His Brother, Emery Kolb".) Tucson: University of Arizona Press, xx [xxii], 344 pp., 34 plates. [Photographs by Ellsworth L. Kolb and Emery C. Kolb.]

► Second state. Quartaroli variant CC. Author correctly indicated as Ellsworth Kolb, and his brother Emery. Refer to Quartaroli variant BB (ITEM NO. 2.3923). There are two states to the University of Arizona reprint, Quartaroli variants BB and CC, as noted with more complete information in the APPENDIX to the present bibliography.

See Chapter 14, "Up the Grand Canyon; Yuma to Lees Ferry, Arizona; March 18-April 27, 1983, 40 days, 500 miles" (pp. 180-197). Not so much a day-by-day travelogue, although some stretches do cover daily incidents. The passage by Hoover Dam is by portage on a service road. The passage through Grand Canyon pays particular attention to the portage past Sockdolager Rapid and a forced row up through Sheer Wall Rapid. The passage by Glen Canyon Dam is by portage through (inside!) the dam.

This is a story of a miracle that happened on a summer river trip in the Grand Canyon in 1998. The accident occurs on the second to last day of a six-day trip down the river, in a side canyon named Havasu. This account is written from two points of view. The first is from the rescuer (Tiffany George) and the second is by the victim (Sylvia Leimkuehler)."

NOTE: This is the only poem in the volume that is pertinent to this bibliography. There are two states to this volume; an imperfect first state, no date [1985], and a corrected second state, 1985; points as follow:

There are two states for this title, each of 2,000 copies.

State 1 (cancelled): No date (preface, p. II, dated 1985); title-page verso notes only, "Copyrights for individual poems appear on the permissions pages, which should be considered an extension of this page." Perfect-bound in four signatures, no dust jacket, in blue wraps, ink color on covers 1 and 4 graded dark to light from top to bottom, "Gathered Waters" in white, "An Anthology of River Poems Selected by Cort Conley" in blue; rear cover with Backwater Books imprint and colophon; rules at tops of pages are misaligned.

State 2: Title-page verso indicates, "Copyright 1985 by Cort Conley[,] All Rights Reserved[,] ISBN 0-9-3566-8-0[.] Copyrights for individual poems appear on the permissions pages, which should be considered an extension of this page. Distributed by Backeddy Books[,] Box 301, Cambridge, Idaho 83610[.] Printing limited to 2,000 copies. No._____ [with enumeration hand-written]". Perfect-bound in eight signatures, in white wraps, title and subtitle in blue ink; with dust jacket, laminated on outside, blue-gray ink color graded dark to light from top to bottom on front and rear, "Gathered Waters" in white, "An Anthology of River Poems Selected by Cort Conley" in blue; front gatefold includes price, "$9.95"; rear cover includes Backeddy Books imprint and colophon; spine of wraps and dust jacket both include the Backeddy Books colophon (absent on wraps spine in 1st state). Page [113] provides identical production information for both states.

[The following information fide Cort Conley to E.E.S., January 2, 2017: First printing (i.e. 1st state) with printer's errors (rules at page tops not aligned) and shipping damage. Second printing (i.e. 2nd state) at the printer's expense, with errors corrected and dust jacket added. The balance of the imperfect 1st state was sent to Conley, who has distributed them gratis over time. Conley added: "I'd given each poet a sheet of the same text paper and asked them to sign their autograph three times. Once collected, they were pasted into three special copies that were bound in pale green goatskin with a watch crystal in the cover that had tiny river pebbles in it." These copies were given away.

1877 2.26738 Through the Grand Canyon on a raft. Weekly Arizona Miner (Prescott, Arizona), (Supplement), 14(18) (April 20): [1], (May 4):.

► With editor's introductory paragraph, followed by a first-person retelling of a solo raft trip in Summer 1861 from Lees Ferry through Grand Canyon, in four days to Fort Mohave on the lower Colorado River. Although written in the first person, it begins with a parenthetical ". . . (said Captain Moss to his listener)". Fiction, of course, but listed here as a matter of historical disambiguation.

"Saturday, we come to Brown's Ferry where there is a ferry boat for the travel on the Chloride-Searchlight road. Here we meet a Cap'n Johnson who was building a big boat. He is kind and interesting. He has been on the river twenty-two years and made through the Grand Canyon rapids with Colonel Birdseye and Lewis Freeman a few years ago." (p. 15)

"We had the books and I began reading them. Then I met Mr. Frederick S. Dellenbaugh who went through the Grand Canyon of the Colorado with Major Powell way back in 1871. He is gentle and kind and one of the dearest men I ever saw. He showed me the rifle and flag he'd had on the river so long ago and encouraged me to make the trip." (pp. 72-73)

1928 26.1367 Bride of the Colorado. (Elmer Clifton, director; John Randolph Bray, producer; Denison Clift, continuity. Story by John Randolph Bray and John Farrow. Starring John Boles, Donal Blossom, William Irving, Henry Sedley, Carl Stockdale, Richard Alexander, and (not credited) Mae Busch.) Pathé Exchange, Inc. [Silent film.]

► This film, also referred to as Pride of the Colorado and under a working name, Menace, was filmed on the Colorado River through Grand Canyon. There are numerous references to the film prior to and during the filming trip, casually known as the Pathé-Bray expedition. Although portions of it seem to have been publicly shown around 1928, the film never was completed for release; and the print seems to have been lost. An early, brief review—seemingly the only known review—was not enthusiastic (see Unsigned, 1928, ITEM NO. 30.1472). A great deal of background information (more than a thousand pages) may be read in the proceedings of a suit adjudicated in the New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division—First Department (1930, ITEM NO. 2.29852; 1931, ITEM NO. 2.22208).

► "One of the most pleasant incidents of my stay out to Grand Canyon was a visit with Mr. Kolb, the local photographer, who with his brother a couple of years ago went way up into Wyoming, launched an ordinary rowboat in the Green River, and then floated down until they entered the Colorado River and, of course, the Grand Canyon. They actually succeeded in making this tremendous trip of hundreds of miles, over rocks, rapids, and rushing currents, and came out at the end alive. He showed me the identical boat in which they made this trip. I could not help but feel that if two young men could be willing to run such superhuman risks merely for the sake of adventure and to secure photographs that no one else had been able to obtain, I ought to be more willing to run some greater risks for the sake of saving perishing humanity." See also inside front cover of this issue, a Kolb Brothers photograph of the Colorado River in Marble Canyon, with editor's legend, "Where the Creator Fills the Creature With Awe", directing readers to the Paulson article.

► Letter entered into the proceedings of the House of Representatives, May 11, 1868, in pertinence to funding for the Powell Expedition. This letter, there formally published as a matter of record, includes one of Powell's early, pre-expedition uses of the term "Grand Canyon": "It is hoped that a survey of that river ['the Colorado river of the West'] can be made from its source to the point where the survey made by Lieutenant Ives was stopped. [. . .] I need not urge upon your attention the importance of the general scientific survey to the increase of knowledge. It is believed that the grand cañon of the Colorado will give the best geological section on the continent."

► 100 copies only? [NOTE: A full-page display advertisement by the publisher, seen in The Chautauquan, 24(6) (March 1897): 772, quotes several reviews, including in the extensive blurb, "THREE HUNDRED MAGNIFICENT ENGRAVINGS, from original photographs and artists' drawings, of which one hundred and eighteen are full page. THERE IS A PICTURE WHEREVER THE BOOKS OPENS. It also contains ten double-page panoramic and topographical views of great value." Two binding states are specified: "Notwithstanding the enormous cost entailed in producing this volume, it is offered at the following low prices : 1—In Extra Fine Cloth Binding, with ornamental cover design stamped in gold and color, printed on fine plate paper, gilt top, per copy—$10.00; 2—In Half Morocco Binding, stamped in gold, printed on fine plate paper, gilt top, per copy—$12.00". Inasmuch as this edition did not sell well, the full-page advertisement two years after publication was obviously an attempt to move limited stock. The different states are corroborated by Dan Cassidy and Bill Bishop; Bishop further remarks that the cloth is copper-colored (in correspondence, May 2026).]

Note p. 55: "The Colorado River is formed by the junction of two large rivers, the Greene [sic] and the Grand, which come together in Utah bringing with them an accumulation of rain and snow and spring water from the Rockies. Through miles of wild canyons and gorges the Colorado then rushes, gathering sediment and débris as it goes. Finally it enters the Marble Canyon, in Utah [sic]. This gorge, the beginning of the Grand Canyon, is exquisite, the bare strata of richly colored marble gleaming with all the brilliancy of an adamant rainbow. Where the Marble Canyon merges into the Grand Canyon, the plateau is cut at right angles by the Canyon of the Little Colorado; and where these three come together the scenery is startling in its weirdness and awful lonesomeness."

2011 2.32052 It's an adventure, go with the flow; leave the luxury at home, and check out the Grand Canyon the way nature intended; rafting Grand Canyon. Escape.com.au (The Sunday Telegraph, Sydney, Australia), (September 25): cover, 10-12.

Savage, Maxwell

1914 2.21612 Riding the fierce red flood of the Colorado. The first modern canoe to undertake the navigation of the Colorado was similar to the 16-foot Peterborough of this tale, for whose occupants the river-wise citizens of Needles predicted everything from wet feet to an untimely entrance within the Golden Gate. 'Better write what letters you want to send home,' suggested a grizzled mulewhacker, who claimed to know the river from its head spring to the Gulf of California. 'Leave 'em with the storekeeper, an' he'll hunch 'em along if we don't hear nothin' from you in a month or so.'" Outdoor World and Recreation, New Series, 50(3) (March): 142-145.

► Regarding a canoe trip from Needles to Yuma, but includes the notable statement (p. 142), "Boats have passed through the Grand Cañon of the Colorado, but the trip will never achieve popularity with summer tourists."

► About Elzada Clover and Lois Jotter on a Nevills Expedition trip on the Colorado River through Grand Canyon.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTE: In 2023, Amazon.com promoted a title, Summary of Brave the Wild River, which was only a contrived "summary and analysis" of the book, perhaps produced with the use of Artificial Intelligence software. Two items were seen in November 2023; one by "Ben Isaac", with a cover photo of two young women sitting on a wall alongside an undefined riparian stream (certainly neither the Colorado River nor the Grand Canyon), the other, with no cover illustration, by "John L. Lemon". The first title advertises in broken English, "This is not a book by Melissa L. Sevignys nor is it affiliated with them. It is an independent publication that summarizes Sevigny's book in details." The second title, in similarly broken English, advertises, "This is an independent publication by John L. Lemon that summarizes Melissa L. Sevigny's book in details[.] The contents of the outline is never to supplant the original book but rather to help readers figure out a smart read. This outline has been approximately created nailing down the fundamental central issues and realities, and summoned to assist developing comprehension you might intrepret the book." A Kindle electronic tablet version attributes the author as "LIFE

Summary" and adds to the unillustrated title image, "(A guide to Melissa L. Sevigny book)"; it also noted (citing a different "author"): "Disclaimer!! This is not a book by Melissa L. Sevigny, nor is it affiliated with them. It is an independent publication by Nora Alonzo that summarizes Melissa L. Sevign's book in detail. It is a summary. The contents of the outline are never to replace the original book but rather to help readers figure out a smart read. This outline has been approximately created nailing down the fundamental central issues, and realities, and summing up subtleties to assist in developing comprehension you might interpret the book." Such productions are not cited in this bibliography, but this note is added here as a matter of contemporary bibliography focusing on one conventionally published title. Note the various attributed authors and similar (though not perfectly identical) disclaimers. This bibliographical note also serves as a cautionary example of what probably are artificially produced texts that may be of interest to human who will research the evolution of AI, a technology that demonstrably can do terrible disservice to works that are more rigorous, human-guided surveys (not to overlook the intents and intellectual rights of the original authors!).

► In reply to the article by Tracie Rodriquez (ITEM NO. 16.1055). Skinner takes blame for cutting free and abandoning below Blacktail Canyon a main frame from a J-rig that wrecked at Crystal Rapid during the 1983 high river flows. Item also includes a photo of the National Park Service's typewritten note dropped to Skinner's group at Redwall Cavern (with a quarter-dollar coin for scale); the notes dropped to parties then on the river. Complete text of note: "DAM RELEASE UPDATE 70,000 cfs will be released from Glen Canyon on June 22 during the afternoon. Flows to continue at this level for several days. CAMP HIGH--BE CAUTIOUS National Park Service 6/22/83".

► Documentary, filmed during a Colorado River trip in Grand Canyon. "Throughout their history, the A:shiwi people have made a pilgrimage through the Grand Canyon to leave offerings at traditional sites, gather materials for their cultural practices, and visit the place where their ancestors first emerged from the four Underworlds and into the light of day. [. . .] The film was created under the direction of the Zuni Elders, to share with the world the importance of the Grand Canyon to the Zuni people's heritage and culture, and advocate for its environmental and cultural conservation." (from the Skyship Films promotional webpage for this film). (Film title is in Zuni and English.)

1903 2.32861 An Arizona wild man. The Religious Telescope (Dayton, Ohio), 69(25) (June 24): 784 [also concurrently paginated for issue, 16].

► Not signed, but quotes Stevens' account from the Colorado River at length, from the Albuquerque (New Mexico) Journal-Democrat (date not indicated). Editor's introduction: "Many strange stories have been told of the 'wild man' of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and while some persons have credited these wierd [sic] tales, they have for the most part been regarded as the ingenious inventions of imaginative travelers, and have passed them into tradition as such. But according to I. W. Stevens, of Cedar, Col., the 'wild man' is not a myth, and he gives a thrilling account of an encounter he had with the creature." Stevens is quoted, begining: "Two years ago I had business in the northwestern part of Arizona that took in the neighborhood of the extreme lower end of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, in Mohave County, Arizona. Having the misfortune of getting my arm broken, I took a trip to the river to kill time and catch a few beaver. I constructed a skiff, with the aid of a friend, and when my arm got strong enough, I took a trip up the canyon as far as I could go with a boat. A few miles above the entrance I hauled my boat upon the sand, and got ready to examine the rock walls." Ends: "Tradition records that years ago hostile Indians captured three men, bound them to logs far up the canyon, and set them adrift upon the swollen river. It may be that this wild creature is one of those unfortunate men who, by chance, freed himself and escaped death, but was made insane by his awful experience."

The frontiersman told me of the adventurous project of a Major Powell to explore the grand canyon of the Rio Colorado, its northern end not far distant from us, a two-years' job, he said. The Powell party, camped there, wanted more men, my informant further told me, and if I offered my services he had no doubt I would be accepted. I laughed at the idea." 2026 28.1741 [PAINTING] View of Tuckup from downriver. 9 September 2022. This was painted on a humpback chub monitoring trip. We were fishing between Tuckup and National canyons with hoopnets and luckily found a very narrow, miniscule beach to camp on, backed up against heavy reeds and vegetation. A beaver lived nearby and was swimming about. The 'camp' has since washed away or has overgrown with vegetation. I was able to paint looking upriver toward the Tuckup camps. Boatman's Quarterly Review, 39(1) (Spring): 45 [inside back cover; legend on p. 44].

Wheeler, George M.

One of the Wheeler surveys embraced an extraordinary upstream exploration of the Colorado River in 1871, from Fort Mohave on the Lower Colorado River, reaching into the Grand Canyon as far as Diamond Creek. The citations here at least partly refer to the Grand Canyon portion of that expedition.

NO DATE 2.6848 Photographs showing landscapes, geological and other features, of portions of the western territory of the United States, obtained in connection with Geographical and Geological Explorations and Surveys West of the 100th Meridian : season of 1871. [No imprint], [Caption and seal] U.S. War Department, U.S. Army, Corps of Engineers, [Washington, D.C.: U.S. Geographical and Geological Survey West of the 100th Meridian], [albumen prints, hand-assembled on heavy stock, in folio].

Includes the Colorado River uprun from Fort Mohave to Diamond Creek. Photographs include:

Camp at the Crossing of the Colorado, just below the Mouth of the Grand Cañon.
Triangulation Station, near the Mouth of the Grand Cañon, Colorado River.
Grotto Spring, Grand Cañon, Colorado River.
View in the Grand Cañon of the Colorado. Walls 5,000 feet in height.
Maiman, a Mohave Indian; guide and interpreter.
Baptismal Font, about 6 miles above Mouth of the Grand Cañon.
View across the Grand Cañon from Grotto Spring.
Grand Cañon, junction of Diamond and Colorado Rivers.
View of the Grand Cañon. Walls near Mouth of Diamond River.

Corresponding views of most of these photographs were also produced as stereographs.

Wiegand, Karl H. von

1900 2.6614 Lost in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. The Wide World (London), 5(28) (July): 431-437.

► The article recounts the efforts to search for William F. Russell of Syracuse, Nebraska, one member of a party who went to the Grand Canyon to examine mining properties, who drowned while attempting to cross the Colorado River that was then in flood. "In their outfit they had a small canvas folding-boat, with which they intended to cross to the other side. Why the foolish men should have tried to cross the swollen river, racing at a fearful speed between the narrow walls of granite, and surging from wall to wall with a crashing roar that well-nigh deafened them—and that in such a boat—is hard, indeed, to understand." William Wallace Bass, John Waltenburg, and R. M. Bleak conducted a search; and this illustrated article is an account of that search by land, which did not succeed in finding Russell. It also includes notes of past experiences in crossing the river by these men.

NAVAJO BRIDGE

UNSIGNED

DATED PUBLICATIONS, GROUPED BY YEAR

1926 12.8105 [Highway bridge proposed.] Building and Engineering News (San Francisco), 26(46) (November 13): 21.

► Grand Canyon, Ariz.—U.S. bureau of public roads is reported to be preparing plans for proposed bridge across the Colorado River at Lee's Ferry." (ENTIRE ITEM)

1927 12.10656 [Grand Canyon bridge.] In: Miscellaneous Notes [SECTION]. The Earth Mover, 14(2) (February): 27, 30.

► "The Grand Canyon of the Colorado is to be bridged at an estimated cost of about $200,000. It is expected that one half the expense will be met by the State of Arizona and the other half by the Federal Government, the latter expenditure to be charged to the Navajo Indians, in whose reservation the bridge will be situated."

1927 12.9632 [Colorado River bridge at Lees Ferry.] Indian Truth (Philadelphia), 4(4) (April): 3-4.

► "The Arizona legislature appropriated $130,000 'to meet a government appropriation' (charged to the Navajos) of $100,000 for a bridge over the Colorado River at Lees Ferry. It is reported that work will begin on the construction at an early date. Announcement was made recently that a commodious hotel would be built on the North Rim of the Grand Canyon, and it is supposed this bridge will make it more accessible to tourists. However, if the bridge is to be of any service, a suitable approach is needed. That will cost at least $300,000, and we wonder where the funds for its construction will come from?" (ENTIRE ITEM)

1927 12.4971 Bridge across Grand Canyon to aid auto traffic. Popular Mechanics Magazine, 48(3) (September): 449.

► Illustration depicts an artist's rendering of a suspension bridge at the site of Navajo Bridge.

1927 12.9661 To bridge Colorado at Lee's Ferry. Michigan Roads and Pavements (Lansing, Michigan), 24(38) (September 22): 12.

► "The United States bureau of Public Roads is reported to be preparing plans for the proposed bridge across the Colorado River at Lee's Ferry, it is stated in a Grand Canyon report reaching the engineering department of the Detroit Automobile Club." (ENTIRE ITEM)

1927 12.5710 Bridging the canyon. Arizona Highways, 3(8) (November): 5-8.

► Includes profiles for three proposed designs; and sketch, "typical half section arch deck".

1928 12.5711 Bridging the Grand Canyon with a 600-ft. steel arch; highway structure on route north from Flagstaff, Arizona, will eliminate difficult and dangerous Lee's Ferry crossing. Engineering News-Record, 100(1) (January 5): 17-18.

1928 12.10659 The highest bridge. The Earth (Santa Fe System Lines, Topeka, Kansas), 25(2) (February): 4.

► Arizona newspapers are claiming that the Grand Canyon bridge, ow uner construction by the Arizona highway department, across the upper end of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, will be the highest highway bridge in the world. The statement is based on the height from low water to the roadway grade, which will be about 407 feet."

1928 12.10605 The bridge builders. Arizona Highways, 5(5) (May): 30.

1928 12.10660 Spanning the Grand Canyon. The Earth (Santa Fe System Lines, Topeka, Kansas), 25(12) (December): 18.

► Short article about the manufacturing and construction of (the later-named) Navajo Bridge, with official dedication announced for June. Photo of the completed bridge.

1928 12.10675 Too much territory. The Engineers' Bulletin (Colorado Society of Engineers, Denver), 12(12) (December): 6-7.

► An editorial regarding claims for tunnels, dams, or bridges as " 'longest' or 'biggest' or 'highest' in the world", that a writer "should be sure of his facts". "A graphically excellent description of the new bridge built by the State Highway Department of Arizona across the Grand Canon of the Colorado near Lee's Ferry . . . is totally spoiled by its headline characterizing the structure as the 'highest in the world.' As a matter of fact, the Twin Falls-Jerome, Idaho, highway bridge across the Snake River is some 40 feet higher". "Remember that the world is a pretty large place after all, and that World Almanac type of statistics may not always be reliable." (The editorial does not, however, point out that the Arizona bridge is not over the Grand Canyon-proper.)

1906 12.9665 [Proposed cableway.] Engineering News, 55(16) (April 19): 447.

► "An item has been sent out to the press by the publicity department of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe relating to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. We quote it in full as follows: [¶] 'It is proposed to stretch a heavy cable across the granite gorge of the Colorado River, from bank to bank, and attach to same a movable steel cage, in which passengers will be transported. The distance from rim to rim in mid air, as the crow flies, is thirteen miles. The distance going down the north wall, crossing the river on the cable and ascending the north wall, is fully twenty miles.' [¶] Those of our readers familiar with the mathematics of the catenary curve may be interested to compute the total vertical drop of a cable with a length of 20 miles and its points of support 13 miles apart. Those who are not can easily see by a roughly approximate computation that the lowest point of such a cable would be several miles lower than the Colorado River at the bottom of the gorge. It may be added that as a cable of such a span, even if made of high-grade steel wire, would barely support its own weight, no passengers are likely to take the dizzy ride for some time to come." (ENTIRE ITEM) Note that there is some confusion with the Engineering News statement, which seems that the proposed cableway would be from rim to rim. This was clarified by the Santa Fe's advertising agent, W. H. Simpson (1906, ITEM NO. 12.9680). Pertains to a cable crossing near where eventually the Kaibab Bridge would be constructed, but cited here for historical completeness.

The Grand Canyon may be likened to a deep trough—the river runs through the bottom of the trough in a narrow gorge, through the granite, about 1,000 ft. deep and from 300 to 400 ft. wide. [¶] In using this aerial ferry, the tourist will go down Bright Angel trail from the hotel, eight miles on horse back to the top of the granite wall, take the cable across about 400 ft. and then ascend the north wall about twelve miles. Of course a cable, stretched 18 miles from rim to rim would be impossible and absurd." NEARLY ALONG THE RIVER

The Proposed "Grand Canyon Escalade"
(Navajo Nation)

This special section of the "Along the River" bibliography is devoted to publications about the once-proposed Grand Canyon Escalade, which, had it been built, would have forever altered the river-running experience at least where travelers pass the mouth of the Little Colorado River. First publicized in 2012 by Confluence Partners L.L.C., a non-Native developer in Scottsdale, Arizona, the Escalade was ostensibly to improve the Navajo Nation's financial and employment base with a tourist center on the east rim of the Grand Canyon above the confluence of the Colorado and Little Colorado Rivers. The project was met with widespread opposition, which Confluence Partners countered through issues of Getting To the Bottom of It, a short-lived, self-interest newsletter. As envisioned, a commercial resort on the rim would be the terminal for a gondola tram that would descend to near the Colorado River, where a riverwalk would lead to a restaurant close by the confluence and an amphi-theater farther upstream on the Colorado. Visitorship was projected at 10,000 people per day. The proposed project experienced considerable opposition for years, not the least from groups of the Diné themselves, with added opposition from other Native American peoples and non-Natives alike. "Save the Confluence" was organized to combat the proposed development. After repeated votes of non-support by popular and administrative groups of the Navajo Nation, declaring a variety of concerns for self-government, cultural degradation, uncertain social benefits, and environmental impacts, the project was defeated in 2017.

► Text of a telegram sent by Stanton, Chief Engineer, to J. C. Montgomery, regarding the drowning of Frank Mason Brown, President, Denver, Colorado Cañon & Pacific Railroad, as noticed in Brown's hometown newspaper. Item contains substantially more background information, editorially included.

Knowles, J. Harris
1898 4.744 A flight in spring : in the car Lucania from New York to the Pacific coast and back during April and May, 1898, as told by the Rev. J. Harris Knowles. New York: [no imprint], 204 pp. ("Seven hundred and fifty copies privately printed for Frederick Humphreys, M.D.")

[Citation added here for its informational value.]

► Travel by private rail car, hosted by Frederick Humphreys. See pp. 168-170, about Knowles' "memory of a service" at the Denver cathedral. A remembrance of attending a "funeral of a gentleman who lost his life in the wild waters of the Grand Cañon of the Colorado." The man is not identified other than as a member of a "railroad surveying party", who certainly was Frank Brown, president of the Denver, Colorado Cañon & Pacific Railroad, who drowned in Marble Canyon. The service (in 1889) was conducted as a funeral, as if the body were present. (Frederick K. Humphreys (1816–1900) in 1853 founded in New York the Humphreys Homeopathic Medicine Company.)

BELKNAP COLORADO RIVER GUIDES

These citations of river guides produced by different members of the Belknap family are based substantially on information provided by Richard D. Quartaroli, whose collection of river maps and his knowledge of them is incomparable. For an early review see the symposium presentation by Quartaroli, "Evolution of the printed Colorado River guide in Grand Canyon, Arizona", in Michael F. Anderson (compiler, ed.), A gathering of Grand Canyon historians; ideas, arguments, and first-person accounts; proceedings of the inaugural Grand Canyon History Symposium, January 2002 (Grand Canyon Association, Monograph 13, 2005), pp. 155-162.

The Belknaps have produced guides in the form of strip maps for various western rivers, appearing in many editions and printings, and in waterproof and non-waterproof states. Some printings of specific editions indicate they are revisions, while in other printings minor changes may be noted by those familiar with these maps, though those volumes do not state that they are revisions. Pertinent points, when known, are included in citations. It has not been possible to list every unique publication because not every known edition and printing have been seen; known points are included here. Further, there may be the occasional discovery of what seem to be variants; for example, Spamer's copy of Belknap's (1969, item no. 10.5) 4th printing (1973) of the non-waterproof state has a back cover like that of the 1st printing, which might indicate the use of wraps overstocked from earlier printings.

Belknap, Buzz [Belknap, William, III]

1969 10.4 Powell centennial : Grand Canyon river guide : river map, historic photographs, Major Powell's own story : special river runners waterproof edition. New York, Salt Lake City, and San Francisco: Canyonlands Press, [48] pp.

► Printed on water-resistant paper, wraps same stock as text; spine both string-stitched and saddle-stapled. [Additional points: two states waterproof, both string-stitched and saddle-stapled, but one has a list of river outfitters on back cover, the other indicates to query National Park Service for outfitters. One printing non-water proof, perfect binding, with back cover list of outfitters.]

1969 10.5 Powell centennial : Grand Canyon river guide : river map, historic photographs, Major Powell's own story. Boulder City, Nevada: Westwater Books, [48] pp.

► Wraps heavier stock than text; perfect-bound. Waterproof and non-waterproof states; 11 printings through 1988. 5th through 11th printings (1974-1988) with reset text on front wrap and Westwater Books river guides promotion on back wrap.

Belknap, Buzz, AND Evans, Loie Belknap

1989 10.6 Belknap's waterproof Grand Canyon river guide : all new color edition. Evergreen, Colorado: Westwater Books, 95 [96] pp.

► New ed. of Belknap (1969); beginning with 2nd printing noted as "revised edition" on title-page verso. Eighteen printings (2nd, 1991; 3rd, 1992; 4th, 1993; 5th, 1994; 6th, 1995; 7th, 1996; 8th, 1997; 9th, 1998; 10th and 11th, 2000; 12th, 2001; 13th, 2003; 14th and 15th, 2004; 16th and 17th, 2005; 18th, 2006. With minor updates, inasmuch as the 1992 printing is the first to include a note relating to the drop of Lava Falls Rapid.

► Glen Canyon Dam to Pearce Ferry.

"These data represent the centerline and measured increments at hundredths, tenths and whole miles, along the centerline of the Colorado River beginning at Glen Canyon Dam near Page, Arizona and terminating near the inflows of Lake Mead in the Grand Canyon region of Arizona, USA. The centerline was digitized using Color Infra-Red (CIR) orthophotography collected in March 2000 as source information and a LiDAR-derived river shoreline representing 8,000 cubic feet per second (CFS) as the defined extent of the river. Every effort was made to follow the main flow of the river while keeping the line approximately equidistant from both shorelines. The centerline feature class has been created to more accurately map locations along the Colorado River downstream of the Glen Canyon Dam. River miles and river kilometers were developed from measurements along this line. The incremental point feature classes were derived from the centerline of the Colorado River datasets. Specifically, the points were generated from nodes extracted from the centerline endpoints of the tenth mile line feature class. The Grand Canyon Monitoring and Research Center (GCMRC) river mileage was cross-checked with commercially available river guides and always fell within one mile of the guides, usually corresponding within a half mile. Additionally, these data were subjected to internal review by GCMRC scientists and commercial boatmen with decades of river travel experience on the Colorado River. River Mile 0 was measured from the USGS concrete gage and cableway at Lees Ferry, Arizona—as per the Colorado River Compact of 1922—with negative river mile numbers used in Glen Canyon and positive river mile numbers downstream in Marble and Grand Canyons. These data were updated in March 2015 using newer ortho-rectified imagery collected in May of 2009 and 2013, both at approximately 8,000 CFS. Due to extended drought conditions that have persisted in the U.S. Southwest, lake levels have dropped dramatically, especially at Lake Mead. A stretch of the Colorado River corridor that was part of Lake Mead in year 2000 has returned to a flowing river once again, and with a different channel that has not previously existed. All changes to the original centerline are downstream of River Mile 260 which is just upstream of Quartermaster Canyon in western Grand Canyon. New river miles and river kilometers were developed from this updated centerline."

[1] Jones privately produced numerous sheet and scroll maps for use on various western rivers. All maps were produced on an as-needed basis. Those that relate specifically to the area covered by this bibliography are cited here. Information significantly contributing to these citations and this note was obtained from Richard D. Quartaroli in January/February 2020. Two price lists from Jones, dated March 20, 1982, and July, 1989, indicate products that were available at those times. The known set of maps are (quoted from the price lists and numbered here for convenience not as record; Grand Canyon products noted in bold):

1982 LIST — "Colorado River Basin": [1] "Desolation-Red C." [and] "Lodore-Split Mtn.", [2] Moab-Green R.", [3] "Westwater Canyon (Granite C. to Moab)", [4] "Cataract Canon (From Moab)", [5] "Grand Canyon", [6] Yampa River (Maybell-Echo Park), [7] "Dolores River (Dolores to Colo. and sturdier roll stock such as Mylar.] [No title per se and often referred to as "Les Jones' Scroll" or "the Les Jones Scroll". Library catalog records generally record catalogers' contrived titles; for example, "Grand Canyon river guide scroll map", "Grand Canyon", "Grand C.", and "Rafting map of Colorado River and Grand Canyon from Lees Ferry, Arizona to Diamond Creek"). Start of scroll notes, "This map is by Leslie A. Jones, 1962". Separate sheet, "Handling Instructions", notes "Copyright 1960". Distributed in plastic bag with instructions on use in bag so as to allow continuous scrolling while on the river. Note that the earlier reproductions on paper were subject to rapid fading in sunlight.

Jones' Grand Canyon map is based on the U.S. Geological Survey's 1924 Plan and profile of Colorado River from Lees Ferry, Ariz., to Black Canyon, Ariz.-Nev., and Virgin River, Nev. (see Birdseye, 1924, ITEM NO. 24.46); the separate Birdseye plans and profiles are reproduced in continuous parallel views. Profusely annotated by Jones with ratings of rapids, notes of river flows during historic trips, miscellaneous historical notes and notes from trips taken by Jones, occasional inset sketch maps of rapids with boat run lines at the times when mapped, and geological notes. Also noted for this citation is a table of data for a kayak run of the river, Lees Ferry to Pearce Ferry, September 1962 (table in two separate sections on scroll). Annotations emended occasionally, sometimes with keyed dates affixed.] [Other specifically interesting annotations, added after 1962, include table, "All time record low water run: 1000 cfs very fine rock exposed", October 1963; table appears in two separate sections on scroll. Scroll concludes with graphical data for river flows according to weeks of the year.

Widths of scrolls can vary between ca. 7-10 inches, depending upon the amount of free space on the medium used. Variants include coverage Lees Ferry to Diamond Creek (a 1995 reproduction, a signed copy acquired by Spamer in 1995, measures 6⅜ inches × 29 feet, 4 inches). Other measurements noted from library catalog records are: Lees Ferry to Lake Mead, Temple Bar (7 inches × 43 feet, 4½ inches); and Lees Ferry to Lake Mead, Overton Arm (8 inches × 51 feet, 5 inches).

Other points (taken from the 1995 variant noted above) — Scroll head notes: "Western Whitewater Snake, Salmon, Colorado, Green, Madison, Yellowstone, Missouri; ride the wilderness whitewaters in reverence before God—with a prayer his strength will be in you—Leslie Allen Jones, 3451 N. River Rd., Midway, Utah, 84049". "Whitewater exploration and mapping—Colorado Basin". Start of scroll headed "To: (226 mi.) Diamond Cr." The 1995 production seems to have been prepared in order to add notations of photo numbers from the Grand Canyon "Legends" river trip of September 1994 (also known as the "Old Timers Trip"). An asterisk notes on the margin, "The Grand Canyon Continuous Photo Album Set is available at the Historical Libraries: Cline Library, Flagstaff, Az., BYU [Brigham Young University], Utah, Univ. of Utah, and from Leslie A. Jones".

Richard Quartaroli's partial record (January/February 2020) of Jones scrolls notes for Grand Canyon the following variants (numbered here for convenience and not for record, parenthetical dates indicate dates interpreted from annotations): [1] Lees Ferry to Virgin River, Colorado River miles 0-330, 1962 (1963?), 11¼-inch paper; [2] Lees Ferry to Virgin River, miles 0-330, 1962 (1964), 7¾-inch paper; [3] Lees Ferry to Lake Mead, miles 0-315, 1962 (1963), 7-inch Mylar; [4] Lees Ferry to Lake Mead, miles 0-315, 1962 (1965), 7½-inch Mylar; [5] Lees Ferry to Diamond Creek, 0-226, 1962 (1995), 6½-inch Mylar; [6] Lees Ferry to Diamond Creek, 1962 (1995), 8½-inch Mylar. Quartaroli also reports (July 2020) [7] a poorly reproduced 7-inch Mylar scroll with many splices that had been acquired by a previous user in 2001, with signs of having been used on the river, which begins at Spring Canyon, and at the end of which is the labeling and notations, "Lower Granite Gorge: Grand C. M.P. 225.5 → 246.5 11.2'/mi. : L. Mead Silting In Begins Abv. Separation Rapid: M. P. 240" and "Out → Temple Bar".]

1964 10.114 Lake Powell : Lee's Ferry to GR Jct. [Lee's Ferry to Green River junction]. Bountiful, Utah: Leslie A. Jones, blue-line photostatically reproduced sheet, scale 1:31,680. (One map in 20 sections on one sheet, 3 feet × 16 feet, 5½ inches.)

[2] Points relating to production, editions, and printings of the RiverMaps series were provided by Duwain Whitis (February and July 2021). The date given in square brackets as a note within a citation is Whitis's record of the date of delivery from the printer, thus the date of availability. These dates with months, except those that may be specifically quoted, do not appear in the publications themselves. Whitis further remarks that changes in cover state may be due to the fact that one of the printers in use laminates both sides of the covers as opposed to just the outside.

► Glen Canyon Dam to Pearce Ferry. 590 maps in one-half mile segments. Sheets headed "River Mile –15" to "River Mile 279.5"; mileages begin with Mile 0 of Birdseye (1924, ITEM NO. 10.119). (Regarding Mile 0 see pp. xxvii-xxviii in the present bibliography.) Maps plot mileage points for GCMRC study, Birdseye, and the markers from the Grand Canyon river guides of Belknap and of Stevens; the GCMRC plots are refined to 0.1 mile points. Actual coverage of GCMRC points go upstream not quite to Mile –15.3 and does not actually go to the dam. Hardcopies can be generated at various scales from computer-data files; e.g., 1:4,000 (4 inches = ¼ mile); contour intervals 2 m on land, 1 m on river surface.

ADMINISTRATIVE PERSPECTIVES

This section is included in the bibliography because the topic is specifically focused on the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon (as so defined for the bibliography, from Lees Ferry to Grand Wash). Readers not interested in the "drudgery" of administrative matters per se can easily ignore this section.

Citations relate to concerns of federal and other administrative agencies in activities in the Colorado River corridor through Grand Canyon, to which are added public responses to these concerns. To wholly omit from this volume the numerous detailed, often very lengthy administrative documents in favor of the bibliography's main focus on material of "human interest" would have weakened its purpose.

A very large number of publications relating to dams once proposed to have been built in the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon region will be found in the more comprehensive Part 12 of THE GRAND CANON Volume 1/Part B (Raven's Perch Media, 2025) or in THE GRAND CANYON BIBLIOGRAPHY (THE GRAND CANON Volume 4, Raven's Perch Media, 2026).

Watt, James

1981 13.5487 Quotations from Secretary Watt. Earth First! 1(5) (May 1): 7.

► Introduced by editor's note. Quotations (unverified in this bibliography) from Secretary of the Interior James Watt, who famously insisted on an aerial evacuation from a Colorado River trip in Grand Canyon. The pertinent quotation: "I went down in September on the Grand Canyon Colorado River and the test, of course, as all of you are familiar, is whether we ought to keep the motors on those rafts or not. The first day was spectacular. I'll tell you that it was an exciting thrilling day. The second day started to get a little tedious, but the third day I wanted bigger motors to move that raft out. There is no way you could get me on an oar-powered raft on that river—I'll guarantee you that. On the fourth day we were praying for helicopters and they came." The editor concludes the list of quotations, "(Really, no shit, Watt said all this!)" See also Reed (1981, ITEM NO. 13.5488).

HYDRAULICS AND HYDROGEOLOGY

This section is included in the bibliography because the topic is specifically focused on the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon (as so defined for the bibliography, from Lees Ferry to Grand Wash). Readers not interested in "science" per se can easily ignore this section.

Citations relate to activities along—mostly in—the river, but include socially and academically intertwined activities like the long-running "Adopt-a-Beach" program of the Grand Canyon River Guides, which uses volunteers to conduct repeat photography of selected beaches along the river, so as to compare the effects of experimental flows released from Glen Canyon Dam. To wholly omit from this volume the numerous detailed, sometimes very lengthy scientific articles in favor of the bibliography's main focus on material of "human interest" would have weakened its purpose.

A very large number of publications relating to dams once proposed to have been built in the Colorado River through the Grand Canyon region will be found in the more comprehensive Part 12 of THE GRAND CANON Volume 1/Part B (Raven's Perch Media, 2025) or in THE GRAND CANYON BIBLIOGRAPHY (THE GRAND CANON Volume 4, Raven's Perch Media, 2026).

► See p. 141: "The famous cataracts of the Nile are due to the fact that the river, cutting down along a course taken on the surface of Cenozoic deposits, has reached a completely buried, irregular surface of granitic rocks. . . . it deepened its channel until the granitic ledges became barriers to further downward cutting at those points. A very similar case is that of the rapids in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. The Paleozoic and younger strata forming most of the canyon walls buried beneath them the Archaean gneisses and granites which the Colorado has now uncovered after cutting down through the softer mantle." ► A review of the Fisher volume. See p. 421: Regarding Fisher's postulation (quoted) that "ocean basins are not caused by depressions in the upper surface of a crust of the same density as that beneath the continents, but that they are due to a greater density and general depression of the sub-oceanic crust." (This quotation is from p. 179 of Fisher.) W. W. B. then independently observes: "Why the crust should be of so much or any greater density under the ocean than at the same depth under continents is not shown; but it is assumed [by Fisher] that it is so, otherwise the waters of the ocean, it is argued, would be so attracted by the northern continents as to make the mean level of the sea greater there than at the south. We have never seen it proved that this is not the case, nor has it been shown that the Colorado river is much higher at its edges than in the middle where it runs through canons several thousands of feet in depth." (Fisher does not mention the Colorado River in this context.)

► SuperDove cubesat remote sensing includes Colorado River at Paria River, with the following qualification: "One of the images from Colorado [sic] captured a sediment plume introduced by the Paria River in the western area surveyed in the studied reach. The area affected by the sediment plume is not within the area surveyed in the field, however. Thus, the plume did not affect the training and validation of the models. However, this image can provide insight into the robustness of different ensembling approaches when extending the depth retrieval to larger reaches in the presence of such environmental perturbations. Thus [this] image from the Colorado River was included in our analysis to evaluate the behavior of different ensembling approaches."

1967 22.1018 Conservation. The Texas Caver (Texas Speleological Association), 12(11) (November): 149.

► Article opens with remarks that "The recent conservation decision not to build a dam in the Grand Canyon will only slightly delay irrevocable changes in the canyon." Dams upstream will stop floods and "soon the Colorado will be dammed by rockpiles at every tributary." Also includes a quotation from John Wesley Powell. The article segways immediately into comments on overgrazing having affected the underground web of caves, particularly two "biologically important" caves in Texas. Thematically confused.

► See pp. 6-7, including the following note in its entirety: "La presa del Grand Canyon, acumula 66 milions de tonelades de sediment a l'any, el que equival al 95% de l'aportament total." (transl. 'The Grand Canyon Dam accumulates 66 million tons of sediment a year, which is equivalent to 95% of the total contribution.") A conflated statement, inasmuch as there is no "Grand Canyon Dam"; but the tonnage figure is ascertained here as pertaining to the gage record at the river gage designated "near Grand Canyon", which is the informally named Phantom Ranch gage. Apparently cited as an example, as there is no ecological discussion of the Colorado River or the Grand Canyon.

APPENDIX

Variants of Ellsworth L. Kolb's Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico (1914–2018)

Compiled by Richard D. Quartaroli

The Special Collections Librarian (Emeritus), Cline Library, Northern Arizona University
Flagstaff, Arizona

ELLSWORTH LEONARDSON KOLB (January 4, 1876–January 9, 1960) and his brother, EMERY CLIFFORD KOLB (February 15, 1881–December 11, 1976), rowed down the Green and Colorado Rivers from Green River, Wyoming, to Needles, California, in 1911-1912, documenting their trip on still and motion picture film. In 1913 Ellsworth continued the voyage to the delta. The Macmillan Company (New York) first issued Ellsworth's book about their trip, with "Photographs by the Author and his brother" (as indicated on title-page), in October, 1914. Through 1971, Macmillan issued 27 variants, differing principally in the number and arrangement of plates, and a minor (but contextually significant) emendation to the foreword by Owen Wister. In 1989, the University of Arizona Press (Tucson) reprinted the first edition in facsimile, adding a "new preface" by Barry Goldwater. However, the new printing contained errors, most notably miscrediting and misspelling the author as "Emory L. Kolb". The errors were corrected for later sales of the volume (see description of these two states in the descriptive notes below). Grand Canyon Association issued facsimile reprintings, first in 2007. Print-on-demand products in various formats, offered by several sources beginning in the 2000s, are transient and potentially inconsistent for each printing by a given producer; they are omitted from this table of variants, but Spamer's main bibliography does list the on-demand imprints that have been located. Illustrations of Macmillan imprint variant styles are placed at the end of this Appendix. At least one of the early printings (though precise details are as yet undetermined) were also issued in boxes (see boxed book illustration), presumably to be sold as a gift-box version).

APPENDIX. VARIANTS OF ELLSWORTH L. KOLB'S THROUGH THE GRAND CANYON FROM WYOMING TO MEXICO

This publication holds the second-longest documented record of a Grand Canyon–Colorado River title continously in print, appearing in 27 editions/printings under the Macmillan imprint 1914-1971, 57 years. (However, there may have been a hiatus in 1920, as indicated in note "§" for Variant F in the table below, though the hiatus has not been corroborated by publisher's or other sales records.) In later years Emery Kolb was essentially the principal outlet for sales, at Grand Canyon, until his death in 1976. Thus this title was continuously available for at least 62 years. The disposition of remaining copies in Kolb's possession upon his death is not known, and it is not clear whether the work was available from Macmillan at any time thereafter.

Information in this list has also been verified over the years by the late David Hellyer (original proprietor of Five Quail Books, Spring Grove, Minnesota), Daniel Cassidy (Five Quail Books, Prescott, Arizona), Karen Underhill (Special Collections and Archives, Cline Library, Northern Arizona University, Flagstaff, Arizona), and Earle E. Spamer (formerly American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania).

Added to this Appendix is a brief historical essay on the editions of this title, "Variants on a Tome: A Journey Through the Grand Canyon", which was first published by Quartaroli in 2003.

Table layout modified from Quartaroli's originally unpublished list; and minor points added by Earle Spamer. Current to January 2026.

New information included in the BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE COLORADO RIVER IN THE GRAND CANYON:

Through the Grand Canyon was typeset in Caslon Old Style No. 37 (fide Brad Dimock, Fretwater Press, to Richard Quartaroli and Earle Spamer, March 4, 2025).

APPENDIX. VARIANTS OF ELLSWORTH L. KOLB'S THROUGH THE GRAND CANYON FROM WYOMING TO MEXICO

Description of Columns in Table

ITEM NO. — Item number as cited in THE GRAND CANON (for details see these citations under Kolb in Part 2 of this bibliography)

Variant — Identifier for Kolb variants (as also noted in THE GRAND CANON). See end of this Appendix for illustrations of Macmillan variant styles

Verso t.p. Date — Latest date of publication, indicated on title-page verso; month and year

Copyright Date — Copyright date, as indicated on title-page verso; copyright was renewed in 1942. New material in University of Arizona reprint copyright 1989

Printing — Indication of "editions" or reprints, as stated on binding, title-page, and title-page verso:

- Repr — Reprint
- Nw Ne — "NEW EDITION" gilt, midway on spine; "New Edition" on title-page
- Nw Ed — "NEW EDITION" gilt, midway on spine
- Ne Rp — "New Edition" on title-page; "Reprinted April, 1927" [for example] on title-page verso
- Ne 12 — "New Edition" on title-page; "Published October, 1914. Twelfth Printing 1952" [for example] on title-page verso [the number in the table note ("Ne 12" in this example) indicates the printing as specified on leaf]
- Paper Re — Paperback reprint (stiff pictorial wraps, facsimile text):

  Variant BB: University of Arizona Press reprinting, 1989, first state. "Emory L. Kolb" listed as author in error [see Cataloging-in-Publication data on title-page verso] and Ellsworth Kolb indicated on title-page as brother; Barry Goldwater's preface (pp. xvii-xx) mistakenly refers to "Emory" [for Emery] Kolb and "Herman" [for Norman] Nevills (p. xviii). This is a facsimile reprint of the October 1914 Macmillan edition (Variant A); however, it is not completely faithful to either of the October 1914 states (Variants A, B), omitting some illustrations

  Variant CC: University of Arizona Press reprinting, 1989, second state. These are corrected copies of existing stock of Variant BB, produced ca. September, 1990. Author corrected to "Ellsworth L. Kolb" and brother correctly identified and spelled as Emery C. Kolb. Also, Kolb's and Nevills' given names are corrected in Goldwater preface to read Emery and Norman, respectively

  [Comparison of University of Arizona first and second states: Variant BB perfect-bound, trim size 21.3 × 14 cm. Variant CC perfect-bound, trim size 20.9 × 13.6 cm. Compared to BB the CC text block is tighter in the binding margin, and the top and bottom text margins are smaller; the outside text margins in both states, BB and CC, are the same. The states show that the wraps of unsold copies of the BB printing were removed by cutting off the glued edge (spine) and the erroneous pages or signature removed; then a gathering of reprinted, corrected pages was substituted for the cancelled pages. New wraps were glued to the text block, with the finished trimmed product (CC) having the size indicated here. —E.E.S.]

cm	Size in centimeters; first number is height of book, second number is thickness of text block (i.e. all pages without covers)
No. Plates/Photos	Number of photographic plates used for illustrations, with number of photos contained thereon. Figures do not include frontispiece or pictorial cover
Plate Location	"insert": plates interleaved in text; "end": plates grouped at end of text
War Format	On p. xvii, "Due to war format all illustrations will be inserted at the end of the text"
Advertisements	Advertisements for other Macmillan Co. books; three pages at end of text
Expeditions Page	Extra leaf between pp. xiv-xv, titled, "Kolb brothers' second expedition", a note about other Kolb expeditions (U.S. Geological Survey expeditions—1921 in Glen Canyon, 1923 in Grand Canyon)
Gilt No.	No. "56640" in gilt at lower right rear cover (also in black print on lower-right rear dust jacket); a printer's or publisher's identification. This number also appears on the back of dust jackets with Variants V–AA
Intro. twofold/dogged	Fourth word of first line of Wister's foreword: "twofold" in original; "dogged" indicates altered version that also omits reference to Santa Fe Railway
Pictorial Cover	Colored picture affixed to front cover. Suffix letters refer to ink color of ornamental border stamped around the picture (Macmillan issues only): o–orange; y–yellow, which printed on dark blue cloth may produce a color more like chartreuse. (See examples at the end of this Appendix.) Illustration on University of Arizona Press and Grand Canyon Association printings is a photographic reproduction of the paste-on illustration on the Macmillan covers, although the illustration on Grand Canyon Association's unstated 3rd printing (ITEM NO. 2.27889, [2018]) refigures the Kolb photo to include the cliff skyline at upper left
Dust Jacket	It is assumed that Macmillan released all variants with dust jackets. Earlier dust jacket flyleaves and backs have no printing; later dust jackets contain blurbs on the front flyleaf and on the back. See example illustrations at the end of this Appendix. In the table, "yes" indicates that a dust jacket did not contain a printed price; "yes $" indicates that a dust jacket contained a printed price; "yes /" indicates dust jacket seen but with price clip (no intact jacket thus far seen)
Original Cost	Prices quoted from dust jackets seen; earlier variants printed price on spine, most variants printed price on dust jacket flap. Prices seen for dust jackets lacking prices are obtained from contemporary Macmillan advertisements for these eds. (bearing in mind that acquisitions on the used-book market might have replaced a dust jacket from another edition). Price on dust jacket of Variant C appears on the spine (see illustration below). Price information acquired mostly from examination of dust jackets seen in private collections of individuals who hold copies of all variants, and in the Special Collections and Archives, Cline Library, Northern Arizona University. Some pricing information also obtained from contemporary advertisements or book reviews for specific editions. Prices for post-Macmillan imprints are first-release prices
Copies	Press runs known or estimated from acquired evidence. The figures for Variants BB and CC were provided to Quartaroli by another researcher, the data not now available from the publisher; these figures represent the supposed number of Variant BB distributed before the remaining copies were corrected and distributed as Variant CC (see discussion under "Printing", above)

"One of the most exhilarating books of adventure produced in this country is the volume by Ellsworth L. and Emery C. Kolb— Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico — which is prefaced with an introduction by Owen Wister. Beautifully illustrated with halftone plates which are in themselves a stirring record of a remarkable achievement, and told with a simplicity and modesty which only serve to enhance the quality of suspense, it is a work calculated to fire the imagination and to set the pulses beating more quickly."— Detroit Saturday Night.

Variations in colors may be due to original production specifications, aging, and the general effects of previous owners' care. Not all variants have been seen with dust jackets, although the presumption is made that all Macmillan printings were distributed with dust jackets.

Some early printings of Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico were distributed in white paperboard boxes. The volume fits snugly inside, with a separate lift-off lid with publishing data printed on the outside. Presumably this was marketed for presentation or gift-giving. The photo above depicts the top of the lid (left) positioned next to the volume seated inside the box bottom. [See also next page.] In addition to this Variant B, contemporary notices have been seen of the availability of a boxed Variant A (see Publishers' Weekly, November 7 and December 5, 1914); the notices describe the volume as published in October and contain 48 plates (thus Variant A).

Care should be taken when identifying "boxed" volumes of Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico. The example shown here is a copy of Variant L (1937) inside a plain, tan paperboard box. The volume does not fit as comfortably as in the publisher's presentation box shown on the previous page, indicating that this box is a close-fit commercial product used for mailing; in this case, from Kolb Brothers.

The following historical essay regarding the editions of Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico appeared as an appendix (pages 171–174) in The Brave Ones: the journals and letters of the 1911–1912 expedition down the Green and Colorado Rivers by Ellsworth L. Kolb and Emery C. Kolb : including the journal of Hubert R. Lauzon (transcribed and edited by William C. Suran) (Fretwater Press, Flagstaff, 2003). The essay also displays an early version of the table that is greatly expanded and updated herein.

VARIANTS ON A TOME:
A Journey Through the Grand Canyon

by RICHARD D. QUARTAROLI
Special Collections Librarian
Northern Arizona University Cline Library

WITH THE 1976 DEATH of Emery, the last Kolb brother, Ellsworth's Through the Grand Canyon from Wyoming to Mexico slipped out of print after twenty-seven unique press runs. At that time some book dealers paid attention to the "Kolb" print dates, even describing each of the two October 1914 editions—one has 48 photograph plates, the other 72—as "first, thus," but few distinguished between them or signatures of the two brothers, Ellsworth L. and Emery C. as authors. The elder Ellsworth wrote the book, with both brothers taking photographic credit. Now that you are holding a transcription of the brothers' journals, you may compare them with the book and find that Ellsworth often used Emery's words in publication.

Haunting used-book stores in the 1980s, I grew curious as to which October 1914 "Kolb" was the true first. I began conferring with collectors and dealers, comparing books in libraries, and obtaining others through interlibrary loan. Although lacking many of the "points" of which my bibliography now consists, in 1991 I printed my first list, interestingly enough containing 28 of the 29 known variants, lacking only the corrected 1989. A bibliography course in graduate school at the University of Texas, taught by Dr. Michael Winship, grandson of bibliographer George Parker Winship, allowed me to further refine the list.

Variant A
October 1914 edition

Bibliophiles began to request copies of my list in order to double-check their holdings, and several, including this author, became obsessed with the search and acquisition. Dan and Diane Cassidy, owners of Five Quail Books—dealing in new, used, and rare Grand Canyon books—became the first to obtain all 29 known variants. They sold the set to a private collector. There are two other complete sets in private hands, and one set at Northern Arizona University Cline Library Special Collections and Archives.

A few "points" of discussion should begin with the aforementioned "firsts." The Publishers' Weekly of November 7, 1914 (p. 1449) stated "with 48 plates," issued in October, $2.00 net, boxed. An October 22, 1914 bill from The Macmillan Company to Ellsworth (Kolb Collection, folder 384) is confirmation itemizing the "cost of manufacturing the Special Edition" of 1880 copies with "24 half-tones special edition," to increase the plate count to 72. Two orders, "for $5.50 for which please send me one copy of the signed edition and one copy of the ordinary edition" and "Will you please send me one of each edition—the $2.00 and the $3.50" (folders 376 and 305), indicate that for $3.50 you received the "special edition," signed, or perhaps with a tucked-in, Ellsworth-signed photograph of both brothers (author's possession). The final hardcover price rose to $7.00 in the 1960s.

Textually there appear to be no changes, however after the 1914 variants, "A-C," Owen Wister's "Foreword" is altered. Replacing "twofold courage" with "dogged courage" at the beginning, and removing over 300 words at the end, are the result of a compromise between Emery and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway. Advertisements for other Macmillan books appeared in "A-E," and beginning with "K" a page on the brothers' involvement with the 1920s U.S. Geological Survey river trips is included. From holdings and order records, all hardcover "A-AA" are assumed to have been issued with dust jackets.

World War II rationing and shortage of supplies caused changes in the publication industry. No pictorial color cover occurred in 1944's "P," but reappeared in the next variant after the war, to be removed in "X-AA." "P-T" contained a "War Format" page noting the plates were now at the end of the text rather than inserted within. Plates remained in this location without the note throughout the hardcover of "AA." The number of plates, most containing one photograph but varying up to three, changed in the two "firsts" but returned to 48 in "C," upped to 72 in "D," halved in "E" to 36 for a yet unknown reason, back to 72, then settled on 76 for the remainder of the Macmillan years.

In 1989, the University of Arizona Press reprinted "Kolb" in paperback, using a Cline Library Special Collections loan copy. Not reproducing "all the photographs in the original edition," there is a count of 29 plates, not including the Frontispiece. Returning to Wister's original "Foreword," the Press added an "Introduction" by former river runner Barry Goldwater. Since Goldwater knew Emery better, misspelling it Emory, he wrote about him more, leading the editorial staff to incorrectly re-assign authorship in "BB." In "CC," Ellsworth regained prominence.

Since the identification of 29 variants over ten years ago, no additional variants have surfaced. If readers discover others not contained on the accompanying list, also found online in Earle E. Spamer's Bibliography of the Grand Canyon and Lower Colorado River, please contact Fretwater Press.

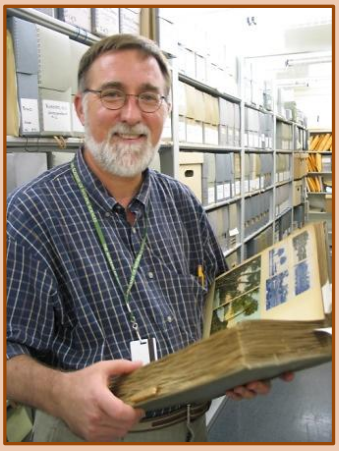
CAMP – COLORADO PLATEAU

The RAVEN'S PERCH MEDIA colophon recalls this bird's habit of gathering and caching objects. Derived from original artwork by Balduin Möllhausen, it is a fine detail from the lithograph delineated by J. J. Young that is "General Report Plate VII" in Joseph C. Ives' Report Upon the Colorado River of the West, Explored in 1857 and 1858 (Washington, 1861), which depicts a wintry camp just south of the Grand Canyon. The scene was sketched and described by Möllhausen on April 10, 1858, while he was perched in a nearby tree. He noted (in translation here), "a couple of ravens croaked morosely on the bare branches of a dried-up fir tree as they waited impatiently for our departure, so that they could scout around the abandoned campsite for fat morsels." (Möllhausen, Reisen in die Felsengebirge Nord-Amerikas bis zum Hoch-Plateau von Neu-Mexico, unternommen als Mitglied der im Auftrage der Regierung der Vereinigten Staaten ausgesandten Colorado-Expedition. Hermann Costenoble, Leipzig, 1861, Vol. 2, p. 83.) Möllhausen's original watercolor painting is now in the Amon Carter Museum of American Art (Fort Worth, Texas; https://www.cartermuseum.org/collection/character-high-table-lands-1988146).

Raven's Perch Media was established in 2010 (the website in 2018), but Möllhausen's remarks on this very scene were not discovered until the translation was made for Balduin Möllhausen's Grand Canyon, another Raven's Perch Media production (2022).

About the Author . . .



My first field of study was geology at Rutgers University in the 1970s. For several years afterward I was in commercial publishing, writing about computer technology — before personal computers. In the early ’80s I began an established period of employment in natural history study collections, first at the New Jersey State Museum, then in the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. My 18 years in the Academy’s employ began in 1986; before that I had been for 12 years a student research assistant and volunteer there. While on staff I was at various times a collection manager in several departments and collections — invertebrate paleontology, paleobotany, mineralogy, malacology, general modern invertebrates (a collection of organisms other than mollusks, insects and arachnids), diatoms, and modern botany; and continued to volunteer in vertebrate paleontology. My publications have embraced each of these fields — as well as historical and bibliographical topics about the Grand Canyon and Colorado River regions. Concurrently, for seven years I was editor and managing editor of the Scientific Publications branch of the Academy, which publishes peer-reviewed articles and monographs from authors around the globe in America’s oldest uninterrupted line of serials on natural history, from 1817. My last five years at the Academy was as its Archivist, for which I had studied in the graduate program of Temple University’s Department of History. On leaving the Academy in 2005 I continued my affiliation as an elected Research Associate. For the next 14 years I was Reference Archivist in the research library of the American Philosophical Society, a polymathic institution in Philadelphia founded in 1743 by Benjamin Franklin, whose staff supports the society’s membership, visiting researchers from around the world, and graduate level researchers on society fellowships. Since November 2018 I am enjoying an active retirement continuing all of these interests.

Following two visits to the Grand Canyon in 1974 that included my first canyon hikes, I began work on a bibliography of the canyon and the lower Colorado River country. In 1981, the Grand Canyon Natural History Association (now the Grand Canyon Conservancy) published the first edition as a part of its new Monograph series of scholarly publications. A second edition appeared in 1990, with a supplement in 1993. In January 2000, a completely revised bibliography was placed on the Association’s website, with its own URL, as a searchable database. Frequently updated, it was discontinued in 2021. In 2012, I privately published the first edition of THE GRAND CANON, a much-embellished resurrection of the print monograph, in digital format (PDF) that can be viewed in book layout on-screen or printed to paper. The fifth edition (2025), significantly revised, embraces the 16th to 21st centuries and cites 111,000 items in 115 languages. (The separate Cartobibliography includes citations for maps of this period, with extensive chorographical notations.) A Cumulative Supplement now continues these bibliographies, in 2026 thus far expanding the count to more than 113,700.

In 1989, the 28th International Geological Congress convened in Washington, D.C., which also offered an ambitious series of field trips across the United States, two of them on the Colorado River through Grand Canyon. My first river trip was as a passenger with an IGC group. In 1990, I began working as a geology interpreter on yearly summer trips in Grand Canyon with a Colorado River outfitter, continuing this until 2001. I participated in two scientific study trips through the canyon under the Glen Canyon Environmental Studies program administered by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, on one of which I prospected for living mollusks, the first such investigation ever to have been made along this canyon river. In 1994, I had attended a Penrose Conference sponsored by the Geological Society of America, “From the Inside and the Outside: Interdisciplinary Perspectives on the History of Earth Science.” This conference for the first time brought earth scientists and historians together to discuss how each group approaches research in these complementary fields; from it I developed new perspectives in my research activities, which extended into revisions of the Grand Canyon–Lower Colorado River bibliography. In 2000, I attended a geology symposium at Grand Canyon on “The Colorado River: Origin and Evolution,” the proceedings of which were edited by Richard A. Young and me. In 2012 I was honored with the annual Pioneer Award from the Grand Canyon Historical Society. Among many affiliations I hold life memberships with the Grand Canyon Conservancy, the Grand Canyon River Guides, and the Arizona–Nevada Academy of Science.
